Reinforcements Rushed Across Stormy Channel, Germans Report New Landing at Orne Mouth; Town 15 Miles Northeast of Rome Is Captured

Battered Remnants of Nazi Army In Disorderly Flight North and East of Italian Capital as Clark's Forces Swarm Across Tiber River

Naples, June 6 (A.P.).—Remnants of the German army fled in disorder north and west of Rome today, as Fifth Army troops swarming over the historic Tiber in many places and against weak resistance advanced another 5 miles beyond the river.

"The battle to destroy the enemy continues without pause," the Allied communique said, and it was made clear that as the United Nations mount the great invasion of the west, there is to be no halt to the slugging Italian campaign.

To the northeast, 15 miles from Rome, French troops have captured Tivoli, on the important Avezzano Road (Highway 5), and as the Fifth Army offensive rolled forward, fanning out west and north of the city on a broad front, additional thousands of prisoners marched to the rear. The momentum of the Fifth's attack and the disorganization of the enemy hourly were becoming more apparent.

All the way from Rome to the sea the troops of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark have crossed or reached the Tiber, and in the city itself they plunged in a constant stream across the 11 spans still remaining intact, to chase the Germans to the north. Infantry crossed the river in force and was reported driving due west of Vatican City, and Allied armored forces spread out over a wide area.

Blow to Kesselring's Plans

Whatever hope Nazi Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring might have had of establishing a strong defense line anywhere south of the northern Appenine Range guarding the Po Valley undoubtedly suffered a sharp blow when the Allied armies struck in northern France. The Mediterranean Air Force's methodical destruction of rail lines in northern Italy and southeastern France has so curtailed the mobility of Nazi reserves that the German command must decide quickly and irrevocably whether to risk any more precious manpower south of the Genoa-Florence limits line.

Enemy divisions still in the flatlands below the city were in desperate straits. Westward from Rome to the sea all the Tiber's bridges have been blown up or have been captured by the Allies, and in the coastal area alone well over 2000 Nazis apparently will be unable to extricate themselves.

Only Isolated Resistance

Only isolated rear guards offered any serious resistance.

From the air the retreating enemy was battered mercilessly. Tactical aircraft concentrated attacks yesterday on his communications leading to the battle area; medium bombers hit road bridges in west-central Italy, north of Rome; fighter-bombers lashed at rail bridges, trucks, motor transport and ammunition dumps, and other aircraft concentrated on strategic targets over a wide area. Four enemy aircraft were destroyed out of the mere eight seen by Allied forces over the battle area, and 13 Allied planes were reported missing.

Millions Join Roosevelt in Radio Prayer

By Edward T. Folliard

With millions joining in, President Roosevelt last night asked God's blessing on the American soldiers who are making the titanic attack to liberate Europe.

"Almighty God," he intoned over the radio. "Our sons, pride of our Nation, have this day set upon a mighty endeavor, a struggle to preserve our Republic, our religion, and our civilization, and to set free a suffering humanity.

"Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms; stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness to their faith."

His Own Composition

The prayer was one which President Roosevelt himself composed. He finished writing it late Monday night between telephone calls from the Pentagon Building, where high-ranking Army officers were keeping him posted on the historic attack.

Copies of it were given out at 11 a. m. so that people might read it in their newspapers and then join the President in reciting it last night.

He prefaced his prayer with word that the liberation assault on Europe had met "with success thus far."

"Last night, when I spoke with you about the fall of Rome," he said, "I knew at that moment that troops of the United States and our Allies were crossing the Channel in another and greater operation which has come to pass with success thus far."

At a White House news conference at 4 p. m. yesterday, President Roosevelt told reporters that the grand assault on Hitler's Fortress was "up to schedule." And that, he said, paraphrasing an earlier statement by Prime Minis-

Dempsey Leads In New Mexico Governor's Race

Albuquerque, N. Mex., June 6 (AP).—Gov. John J. Dempsey, seeking renomination on the Democratic ticket, tonight had a lead of 604 votes to 97 over Mrs. Edna Peterson of Albuquerque, on returns from 13 of New Mexico's 900 voting points in today's primary elections.

For the Republican gubernatorial nomination, returns from 11 precincts gave Glenn L. Emmons, Gallup banker, 129 votes to 117 for Carroll G. Gunderson, former legislator.

Returns from 12 incomplete precincts gave Robert Valdez 217 votes to 194 for Representative A. M. Fernandez. Clinton P. Anderson, the other incumbent of the State's two seats in Congress, led the field at that point with 465 votes.

Balkan Landing Reported

Ankara, June 6 (AP).—Ankara buzzed tonight with reports of an Allied landing in the Peloponnesus and, although there was no official confirmation, responsible quarters said it could be true now or shortly.

(Peloponnesus (Island of Pelops) is that part of Greece south of the Isthmus of Corinth and is a potential Allied stepping stone to the Balkan mainland.)

A high source said, however, that an Allied landing there definitely would not change Turkey's neutrality at this time. News of the opening of the Western Front in Europe was heard in Ankara with interest, but without manifestations.

Nazis Denied Wolfram

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius announced last night that Portugal has stopped all production and export of wolfram to Germany as a result of negotiations with the United States, Britain and Brazil.

"The action of the Portuguese government should prove a factor in shortening the war inasmuch as it will deprive the enemy in Europe of important quantities of a vital war material," Stettinius said.

Yanks First to Land

Aboard H. M. S. Hilary off the Liberation Coast, June 6 (U.P.).—The first ground forces to land on the French beaches Tuesday were Americans. They went ashore at 6:30 a. m. followed by Canadians and British an hour later.

Combined British and American paratroopers shared the honors of being the first soldiers of the liberating armies to set foot on French soil.

Canadians Score Quickly

With Canadian Forces in France, June 6 (Via London) (U.P.)—A Canadian liberation force won its beachhead in two hours and 45 minutes and was well on its way to intermediate objectives at mid-morning Tuesday.

Nazis Claim Successes

By the United Press

A German broadcast heard Tuesday night by Blue Network listeners said that heavy German tank attacks had been launched against the Allied beachhead east of Cherbourg. The broadcast asserted that beachhead forces had been wiped out at Bayeux, 15 miles northwest of Caen, and Isighy, 32 miles west-northwest of Caen.

Germans Dumfounded

Bern (Wednesday), June 7 (U.P.).—Reports from the German frontier early today said that the German public was surprised, bewildered, angered and dumfounded by the German high command communique admitting the Allied landing in France was successful after being told that it could not be done.

Goering Exhorts Pilots

London, June 6 (U.P.).—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, in an order of the day, told Nazi airmen that "the invasion must be fought off even if it means the death of the Luftwaffe."

U. S. Bombers Deal 1st Blow From Russia

German Airdrome At Mouth of Danube In Romania Blasted

United States Heavy Bomber Base in Soviet Russia, June 6 (AP).—Striking from bases in Russia for the first time in history, heavy bombers of the Fifteenth U. S. Air Force today blasted a German airport at the Romanian City of Galati, at the mouth of the Danube River, and returned to Russia.

It was the second phase of the shuttle bombing over the Russian-German border by the Mediterranean-based American heavy bombers which landed in Russia after hammering Debrecen, Hungary, last week.

The attack was on a target in direct support of the Red army and the Flying Fortresses were escorted by both Soviet and American fighters, as they were when they crossed the German-Russian front in the initial phase of the shuttle bombing trip.

Today it was a complete joint operation, for Red army ground crews worked shoulder to shoulder with GIs in loading bombs and servicing the ships.

A communique said six enemy interceptor planes were shot down and two American fighters had not yet returned.

Republican Wins Congress Race in 11th N. Y. District

New York, June 6 (AP).—A Republican was elected tonight in one of two special congressional elections in normally Democratic districts in New York City, and a Democrat was elected in the other.

Republican Ellsworth B. Buck defeated Thomas V. Cantwell, Democrat with American Labor Party backing, 14,269 to 10,764, in the Eleventh District.

The district, governing Staten Island and part of lower Manhattan, had gone Democratic for the past 25 years. Representative James A. O'Leary, Democrat, whose death led to the special election, won by 9000 votes in 1942.

In the Fourth District, a section of Brooklyn unofficial returns showed that Assistant District Attorney John J. Rooney, Democrat, indorsed by the American Labor Party, easily defeated Republican William G. Nolan, 4860 to 1850.

Landings Took Foe Completely By Surprise

By Bob Miller

Aboard a U. S. P-T Boat Off France, June 6 (AP).—The landings caught the Nazis completely by surprise.

It was not until 3:30 a. m. that a German reconnaissance plane sighted the United Nations invading forces moving into position and this was too late to be effective.

Dawn revealed the most amazing sight of this or any other war.

There were ships everywhere I looked. Planes were darting through the clouds above them.

Heavy broadsides of American and British battleships and cruisers rumbled through the overcast and yellow flames from the gun muzzles all but obscured the warships as thousands of tons of explosives were sent shoreward against German installations.

Jockey for Position

Destroyers and landing craft jockeyed for position, awaiting the opportunity to discharge their cargoes.

So completely asleep were the Germans that British minesweepers escorted by this P-T squadron ran interference for the invasion by clearing a broad path right up on the beaches without once being challenged.

This unpredicted maneuver was carried out without the loss of a single P-T. Despite rough seas which left crews bruised and battered and many actutely seasick, the American P-Ts shepherded the minesweepers along the charted route all night. Because of the slowness of the minesweepers it had been necessary to begin the operation in broad daylight Monday, but perfect air cover by the United States Air Force and the RAF kept away any German planes.

Crewmen Watch Battle

P-T and sweeper crewmen practically within gunshot range of German batteries watched a battle between planes and German anti-aircraft batteries ashore.

Huge bombs of a mysterious type rained down upon the Germans. They retaliated with on ack-ack barrage.

The naval barrage began at 5:40 a. m.

En route back to an English port, the squadron was never once out of the sight of ships from one side of the Channel to the other.

U. S. Bombers Hit Truk and Ponape

Pearl Harbor, June 6 (AP).—American bombers, carrying out a half-dozen weekend raids against Japanese positions in the Central Pacific, battered airfield runways and gun positions at Truk, Ponape, Nauru and in the eastern Marshalls, the Navy announced today.

Yanks Within 1½ Miles of Biak Airfield

3 Counterattacks Repulsed in Area Of Maffin Bay

Allied Headquarters, New Guinea (Wednesday), June 7 (AP).—Hard fighting Yank forces which since May 27 have been striving to capture Mokmer airfield on Biak, in the Schouten Islands, now have battled to within a mile and a half of their objective, headquarters announced today.

The advance was scored by a flanking force along cliffs dominating the airfield, a base coveted because it would put the Americans within good bombing range of the Philippines.

On another invasion beachhead 200 miles to the southeast at Maffin Bay, Dutch New Guinea, 107 Japanese were slain Sunday as the Yanks there repulsed a counterattack.

At still another invasion point to the southeast in the Hollandia-Aitape vicinity, patrols killed 283 Japanese, found 106 more dead and took 33 more prisoners.

The enemy air force, out in greater force than it has risked in many months, was reported in today's communique to have "twice ineffectively raided our positions" in the Schoutens, a group of islands in Geelvink Bay off north Dutch New Guinea. One was downed by antiaircraft.

Allies Clear Beaches of Enemy, Push Inland 13 Miles at One Point; Operation Called 'Satisfactory;' Eisenhower Serene and Confident

By Wes Gallagher

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force (Wednesday), June 7, (AP).—Allied troops swiftly cleared Normandy beaches of the dazed Nazi survivors of a punishing sea and air bombardment and armor-backed landing parties ranged inland today in a liberation drive which the Germans themselves predicted would expand.

Reinforcements streamed across the white-capped channel.

The German radio, in a dawn broadcast, said the Allies had made "further landings at the mouth of the Orne under cover of naval artillery" and that heavy fighting was raging on the coast.

Some reports reached here that Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's men had cut at Caen the Paris-Cherbourg Railway, a main route supplying Hitler's defense forces in the Cherbourg Peninsula. The German high command, however, insisted that no Allied troops had penetrated Caen.

Prime Minister Churchill first disclosed that Allied troops were fighting in Caen, on the River Orne, nine miles inland, a hub of roads and railways radiating all over northern Normandy. He said the operation was proceeding "in a thoroughly satisfactory manner" and with unexpectedly light casualties.

Returning RAF pilots said: "We could easily tell the beaches were secure—we could see our soldiers standing up."

In the first dispatch received from the soil of France, a Canadian correspondent said the Canadian invasion force won its beachhead and moved inland after just two hours and 45 minutes of fighting.

Caen was the only point specifically named here as a scene of fighting, although penetrations as deep as 13 miles were reported.

Nazi-controlled radios, however, reported Allied landings at a dozen points, with the most important on both sides of the estuary of the River Orne.

Where Allied Troops Hit

From west to east along the 100-mile shoreline, Axis accounts said Allied sea-borne and air-borne forces struck at:

The port of Barfleur, 15 miles east of Cherbourg; the fishing village of St. Vaast la Hougue, 5 miles south of Barfleur; both sides of the Valognes-Carentan Highway, a section of an important supply road to Cherbourg running 5 miles inland from the peninsular coast.

The 27-mile-long area between Carentan and Bayeux; the River Orne Estuary; a 15-mile stretch of beaches in the Villers-Trouville region across the Seine Estuary from Le Havre; and the town of Honfleur, on the Seine, 6 miles southeast of Le Havre.

The German-controlled Vichy radio also said that a vicious fight developed north of Rouen, on the Seine, 41 miles east of Le Havre, "between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German forces."

Channel weather was adverse, a strong northeaster kicking up the waves. But this was not permitted to halt the stream of reinforcements and supplies for the forces hacking out positions along a 100-mile front between Cherbough and Le Havre.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander, was serene and confident of success in the great land, sea and air blow, launched

Text of Second Communique On Operation

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force (Wednesday), June 7 (AP).—The SHAEF communique, issued shortly after midnight (6 p. m., Tuesday, Eastern War Time), follows:

Shortly before midnight on June 5, 1944, Allied night bombers opened the assault.

They attacked in very great strength and continued until dawn.

Between 6:30 and 7:30 a. m. this morning two naval task forces commanded by Rear Admiral I. R. Philip Vian, flying his flag in H. M. S. Scylla (Capt. T. T. M. Brownrig, C. B. E., R. N.) and Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, USN., in the USS. Augusta (Capt. E. H. Jones, USN.) launched their assault forces at enemy beaches.

Naval Might Gathers

Naval forces which had previously assembled under the overall command of Adm. Sir Bertram Ramsay made their departure in fresh weather and were joined during the night by bombarding forces which had previously left northern waters. The channels had to be swept through large enemy minefields.

This operation was completed before dawn and while the minesweeping flotillas continued to sweep toward the enemy coast the entire naval forces followed and swept the channels behind them toward their objectives.

Shortly before the assault, three enemy torpedo boats with armed trawlers in company attempted to interfere with the operation and were promptly driven off.

One enemy trawler was sunk and another severely damaged.

The assault forces moved toward the beaches under cover of a heavy bombardment from destroyers and other support craft while heavier

'Walls of Burning Oil Couldn't Stop Attack'

Stockholm, June 6 (INS).—Dispatches from Berlin tonight quoted a German military spokesman as saying that "not even walls of burning oil could stop the waves of Allied attackers" which stormed the bristling heart of the Atlantic wall. He admitted that at Caen the Allies are holding a 16½-mile bridgehead.

Just Another Step Toward Victory

District Is Outwardly Calm At Report of Allied Landings

By David Karr

Washington heard quietly yesterday the news that the liberation of Europe was under way, bowed its head momentarily in prayer for the men fighting for freedom on the beaches of France and continued about the business of helping to win the war.

There was only one word to describe the news—it was simply and literally stunning. On the beaches of the Channel coast and on the battlefields behind the lines, our fine, brave lads were dying. More of them will die today, but those who lived and fought must have gained strength and courage from the prayers that were said for them in hundreds of churches and synagogues as people of all walks of life from the President to the lowliest messenger in Government building corridors joined in a plea to the Almighty for speedy victory and a minimum of bloodshed.

Streetcars, buses and taxis crowded with Government workers en route to their offices in the morning echoed the excitement aroused by the initial news that the liberation was under way. There were a few who doubted that the landings were actually on. Their doubts had been raised by the false flash last Saturday afternoon. For those who had heard reports giving new details as Allied troops hurled themselves in new waves onto the shores of France, there were no doubts—the hour for the liberation of Europe had struck.

In the hours after dawn, small groups entered churches and synagogues to ask for Divine guidance and to pray for the safety of the men in the armed forces already battling the enemy on the Continent. There was no gaiety, there were no parades, no work stoppages. Here and there, a woman wearing a service star on her lapel, brushed aside a tear, thinking of a son overseas, perhaps even then landing from a giant Army air transport behind the Atlantic

Tonight Is Legal Deadline

House Votes for Pre-election Pearl Harbor Court-Martial

By Robert C. Albright

Voting on an almost unbroken party line, House Republicans yesterday amended a House resolution in an effort to force trial of Pearl Harbor's retired commanders before the November elections.

The revised measure promptly hit a House-Senate conference snag, that threatened to tie it up beyond tonight's legal deadline on a Pearl Harbor court martial.

The Senate had voted to extend the statute of limitations a full year, but House Republicans, led by Representative Dewey Short (R., Mo.), cut the period down to three months, by a 164 to 135 party vote.

Vainly protesting that the change would force high ranking Army and Navy officers to leave their war posts for court martial proceedings against Rear Adm. Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, Democratic leaders backed a recommit motion. They were defeated 190 to 149. Both parties then joined in passing the amended bill, 305 to 35.

The Senate later appointed conferees favoring a full year extension. These supported the more moderately worded Senate resolution, directing the War and Navy Secretaries to proceed "forthwith" with an investigation, and "to commence such proceedings . . . as the facts may justify."

Unless the House conferees today accept the full year time limit which would lift the trial out of the election background, the limitations statute will expire at midnight. Even if the resolution beats the deadline, there was a possibility the President would veto it.

One of the Senate conferees, Senator A. B. Chandler (D., Ky.), told the Senate Monday the time limit probably already has expired since an extension voted last year did not become law until after the December 7, 1943, deadline. Chandler, and many of the House Democrats argue the validity of court-martialing either Kimmel or Short must rest solely on waivers of immunity already signed by the December 7, 1941, Pearl Harbor commanders.

1000 Planes Carry Troops Into France

War Sidelights

Bad Weather Held Up Blow For 24 Hours

London, June 6 (AP).—Storm predictions postponed for one day the Allied landing assault on the continent, Allied headquarters disclosed today, although the real thing came despite wind-whipped seas and forbidding flying conditions.

Gambling 'Blackout'

Reno, Nev., June 6 (U.P.).—Reno's gambling clubs observed Deliveration Day by agreeing to remain closed until 6 p. m., as a tribute to those participating in the Battle of Europe.

Airborne Units Named

London, June 6 (U.P.).—A German DNB news agency broadcast claimed today that the Twenty-eighth and 101st American Parachute Divisions had been dropped in the Normandy Peninsula area of France. The Nazis claim added that "many have been taken prisoner."

International Dateline

New York, D-Day (U.P.).—Memo to war desk; Dr. Benjamin Shallet called. Said he was dating all his letters "D-Day" today instead of June 6. Thought it was a good idea and might be worth a story for the papers.

Again a Reporter?

London, June 6 (AP).—It is probable that Prime Minister Churchill will give an almost day-to-day account in Commons on the fortunes of the Western Front following his two appearances today.

A Customer, Almost

St. Joseph, Mo., June 6 (AP).—When the German radio announced landings on the coast of France ahead of London's first flash, H. D. Bradley, publisher of the St. Joseph News-Press, wired the Nazi news agency DNB:

"Interested in your bulletin service. Please quote rates."

Allies Conducted Feints

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 6 (AP).—It can now be revealed that the Allies have been conducting a series of feints in advance of the landings today.

These feints were predicted sometime ago by Prime Minister Churchill, and wer designed to lull the Germans so they would never know when the blow was coming.

Numerologists Note

Denver, June 6 (AP).—Numerology students pointed out today that the European landing started at the sixth hour of the sixth day of the sixth month—6 a. m., London time, June 6—while firing in World War I ceased the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month—November 11, 1918.

Others Rake Coast Area With 10,000 Tons of Bombs

By W. W. Hercher

London (Wednesday), June 7 (AP). Supreme headquarters announced today that more than 1000 troop-carrying aircraft delivered the largest air-borne force in history into France yesterday as other Allied planes—in the war's greatest air operation—ruled not only the French beaches but also far inland.

Ten thousand tons of aerial bombs helped clear the way for the ground troops. Only 50 German planes came up to meet the vast aerial armada.

In all, the Allies made more than 7500 sorties between midnight and 8 a. m. yesterday. Prime Minister Churchill told Parliament that an armada of 11,000 first-line planes sustained the assault.

Scores of U. S. heavy bombers conducted the first American raid of the war from their new bases in Russia yesterday, showering tons of high explosives and incendiary bombs on an airdrome at Galati, a Romanian city on the lower Danube River. The sky giants were escorted by both Soviet and American fighters.

More than 1000 British heavy bombers filled the night with thunder. At dawn the Americans sent another fleet of more than 1000 heavies into the air.

In the light of Reich Marshal Goering's order of the day, in which he instructed the German air force to repel invasion "even if the Luftwaffe perishes," there were only two explanations why the German air force did not put up a fight on D-Day.

One was that the enemy was caught flat-footed.

Germans Blame Weather

The other, offered by the Berlin radio, was that "the German fighter arm was extraordinarily handicapped by the extremely bad conditions of visibility on the Channel." The Allied airmen, however, braved this weather, described as "very bad."

There was antiaircraft fire in the clouds and the Germans even used small arms in a desperate attempt to bring down the bombers.

The British bomber command threw more than 1300 aircraft against the enemy's coastal batteries in the darkness preceding the assault, and from 11:30 p. m. Monday night until dawn they sent well over 5000 tons of bombs cascading on the French coast. This was the greatest weight of bombs ever dropped by the British in one night.

American fighters were in the air continuously throughout the day, bombing, strafing and patrolling ahead of the ground troops.

Every plane in the big fleet that flew the first troops and equipment to the continent traveled only a few hundred feet off the ground, stretching for more than 200 miles. It attracted only small arms fire, mostly from machine-guns, as they drove into France to the "dz's" (dropping zones.)

Glad Drive Has Started, Nazis Assert

London, June 6 (AP).—Nazi propaganda harped today on the theme that the Germans were glad the final test had come in the west for a showdown with the Allies and were confident that the outcome would mean German victory.

Nazi radio commentators and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels himself—acknowledged that this attack was no mere sham, and that the real test in France had come at last.

The German propaganda minister, speaking at a Nationalist Socialist Party meeting, blustered thus, according to the German radio:

"The enemy believes the situation in Germany to be the same as in 1918, but he is mistaken. The ears of the Germans are shut against enemy propaganda and slogans. The nerve campaign recently launched by the enemy in connection with the question of invasion likewise failed to impress the German people. We are ready to receive the enemy."

"German Moral Supremacy"

A commentator for DNB, German news agency, put it this way:

"The German soldiers have always wished for the invasion to come so they could show their moral supremacy in a fight that is not marked by material inferiority such as was the case in Africa and Italy. All our hopes and expectations are thus expressed in the words: 'They are coming—and it is good that they should come.'"

Underlying the torrent of words which poured from the German radio appeared a note of relief that the war of nerves finally was at an end, but despite the vaunted confidence in ultimate victory, the commentators were aware of the might of the Allied assaults.

One of them said:

"It need not be specifically stressed that superiority at sea as regards size and number and kind of naval forces is clearly on the side of the two strongest naval nations—the United States and Great Britain."

Another remarked:

Anglo-U. S. 'Big Aims'

"The invasion propaganda which the Anglo-American news services began today and Monday morning, leaves no doubt but that the Anglo-American military leaders are pursuing very big aims."

Allied Troops in Picnic Mood As They Board Landing Craft

By Howard Whitman
Representing the Combined American Press

A Liberation Port in England, June 6.—They boarded the landing ships as if they were headed for a Sunday School picnic. It didn't matter that death might be there, too. For days the cream of America's fighting men poured through this port and streamed aboard the landing armada.

Never were men more anxious to get on with so grim a task.

Many of the men went aboard with shaved heads, particularly the hard-fighting assault troops. I asked a couple of them why. "We just do it for the hell of it," said one.

But he was spoofing. The reason thousands of liberation boys shaved their heads close is that this reduces danger of infection in case of head wounds.

All of them wore gas protective clothing and carried waterproof gas masks. Their paymasters had given each man $4 liberation money and some had obtained more by cashing in their British funds.

The landing was mounted along a stretch of the British coast. So tremendous was the operation that it can best be understood by picturing Britain as a series of funnels with their open ends in the interior of the country and their spouts at embarkation points along the liberation coast. The assault forces—men and equipment—poured down these funnels in accordance with a fantastically detailed timetable.

First the liberation forces were gathered, some of them months ago, in concentrated areas in the interior. Then within the last two months they were moved into marshalling areas where they were briefed and equipped for the landings.

As the men hopped from trucks to board ships, embarkation officers checked every man by calling out his last name and having him respond with his first name and middle initial. Just before he stepped aboard he was given a life preserver.

He was also given seven sticks of chewing gum, four boxes of matches, a box of body insecticide powder, three boxes of K rations, three boxes of D rations, pipe, cigarette and chewing tobacco, water purification tablets, a carton of cigarettes or cigarette makings, 1 razor blade, a tin of canned heat, 12 seasickness pills and 2 vomit bags.

War-Painted Indians Landed With Paratroopers in France

Ninth Air Fore Troop Carrier Base, England, June 6 (U.P.).—War-painted American Indians wearing scalplocks were among the first wave of paratroops dropped with demolition equipment upon the German defenses in France today.

They dropped from the skies and fanned out over the countryside to raise havoc with stealth like that of their forebears.

The Indians were a group known as "The Filthy Thirteen," which was part of a larger unit dubbed "The Braves." It was composed of Yaqui and Cherokee tribesmen.

The paratroops also included a Hindu high diver and numerous daredevil automobile drivers and former college athletes.

The Indians were trained demolition engineers, packing 80 pounds of equipment each. They painted their faces red and black. Their average age is 23 for enlisted men and 25 for officers. Their weight is limited by regulations to 185 pounds.

This group was activated at Tocoa, Ga., in July, 1942, and its boast is that it suffered only two fatalities in many thousands of practice jumps.

Thousands of paratroopers were dropped "dead on the targets" by some hundreds of gigantic Dakota carrier planes operating in three wings from many bases in Britain.

While American paratroopers were striking blows of demoralization at German communications, air fields, supply dumps and command points, British airborne units struck further along the French coast, completing a second wing of night operation.

Brig. Gen. Paul L. Williams, whose troop carriers led the invasion of Sicily, early this morning congratulated all wings under his command on the successful execution of their missions.

Spitfire Pilots Blast Mortars To Save Yanks

U. S. Fighter-Bomber Base, Britian, June 6 (U.P.).—"It was wonderful. There they were, marching in to die, just as if they were going to a ball game."

This was the report on the opening of the liberation campaign brought back by 1st Lieut Roy L. Saux, 23, Gretna, La., a Thunderbolt pilot who watched the drama on the beaches from 4000 feet.

With 1st Lieut Jay C. Bloom, 21, Troy, Pa., Saux told how the determination of American infantrymen and the sharp eyes of British Spitfire pilots saved one landing group from being blasted back into the sea on the Normandy coast.

"The Germans had hidden themselves in cliffs facing the beach and were pouring deadly mortar fire down upon the advancing Americans," Bloom said.

"They did not have any cover except bomb-made mounds but they pushed forward, with men falling every way you could look. It was heart-breaking to hear their leader calling through his radio: 'For God's sake, get those mortars quick. Dig them out boys, they are right down our necks.'"

A Spitfire pilot was then heard reporting that he had sighted the mortar positions and was ordered by an Allied controller in a landing craft to blast them out. With the aid of several other Spitfires, this was quickly done and the infantry continued to push inland unhampered.

Land mines also were encountered, however, and Saux described their devastating effects as one group of infantrymen rushed from the boats: "Suddenly there was a large blast and when it was over many soldiers were strewn on the ground.

"Others got up and just kept right on going. I tell you it made me proud to see that. You could see several of our guys making motions with their hands as if dusting themselves off."

Renaming of Street To 'Eisenhower' Urged

Denison, Tex., June 6 (AP).—Mayor W. L. Ashburn announced today he would favor a proposal to rename Day st., on which Gen. Ike Eisenhower was born, to Eisenhower st. "I think the idea proper for Denison, as the general's birthplace, to show appreciation of the No. 1 war leader," he said.

Congress Asked To Establish 69 Cemeteries

By the Associated Press

The War Department, on the "hypothetical assumption" that 100,000 American fighting men will die overseas in this war, wants 69 new national cemeteries.

This was disclosed yesterday in a report by the department to the House Military Committee in support of a bill to establish a national cemetery in every State.

The department emphasized that the 100,000 is just a round figure settled on for purposes of calculation, that there is no telling how many may be killed before peace comes.

Records show 20,176 overseas deaths of American military personnel between December 7, 1941, and November 17, 1943.

To Be Returned to U. S.

The department plans to return all overseas dead after the war, if the next of kin request. Others will be interred in national cemeteries abroad. In only three cases so far have the next of kin requested burial abroad.

The cemetery development program, the report continued, contemplates establishment of burial grounds as accessible as possible to survivors of deceased service men. Many of the 77 existing cemeteries would be discontinued, some immediately and others as soon as available graves are filled, and placed in a caretaking status.

There are now an estimated 14,271,524 veterans of all wars eligible for burial in national cemeteries, and the department said need for facilities for their burial should continue until the year 2028.

By establishing a cemetery in each State near centers of population, the report explained, each State would have a national memorial to its own war dead.

Among the existing cemeteries to be retained should the development program win congressional approval is the one in Arlington, a. Among cities to get new ones would be Washington; Annapolis, Md.; Richmond, Va.; Roanoke, Va.; and Charleston, W. Va.

Senate Confirms Judge

The Senate yesterday confirmed Ambrose O'Connell of New York as associate judge of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. He succeeds Irvine Luther Lenroot, resigned.

King George Asks Prayers For 'Crusade'

London, June 6 (AP).—King George VI tonight called upon his subjects to offer up "earnest and continuous and widespread prayer throughout the present crisis of the liberation of Europe."

Prayer, he said, would fortify the "determination of our sailors, soldiers and airmen who go forth to set captives free."

"At this historic moment surely not one of us is too busy, too young or too old to play their part in the nation-wide, perchance world-wide, vigil of prayer as the great crusade sets forth," the King said in a BBC broadcast.

"After nearly five years of toil and suffering we must renew that crusading impulse on which we entered the war and met its darkest hour. We and our Allies are sure that our fight is against evil and for a world in which goodness and honor may be the foundation of life of men in every land.

"That we may be worthily matched with this new summons of destiny, I desire solemnly to call my people to prayer and dedication.

"We are not unmindful of our shortcomings of the past and present. We shall not ask that God may do our will but that we may be enabled to do the will of God; and we dare to believe that God has used our nation and empire as an instrument for fulfilling his high purpose."

FBI Head Calls For 'Alertness' On Home Front

J. Edgar Hoover, Federal Bureau of Investigation head, issued the following statement yesterday in relation to precautions which should be taken:

"We have advised all enforcement agencies throughout the country today that the invasion was a signal that should be taken for increased vigilance and alertness at home. The fact that we have had no enemy-directed acts of sabotage to date should merely heighten our determination that no Nazi saboteur should be permitted to destroy any of our production or supply lines.

"Every law enforcement officer throughout the country should be increasingly on the alert and citizens should be encouraged to be calm but should promptly report any suspicious act to the proper authorities."

Allies Hit the Beach on French Shore . . .

3 U. S. Battleships Help Batter Coast

Both American And British Naval Losses 'Very Light'

By James M. Long

London (Wednesday), June 7 (AP).—The United States Navy, with two rear admirals riding in cruisers and paced by the battleship Nevada, was a part of a 4000-ship Allied armada which seared and blasted German defenses before the assault troops hit the beaches of France, it was announced today.

(The U. S. battleship Texas and Arkansas also took part in the bombardment, NBC quoted the BBC as saying, adding that the British battleships Warspite, Nelson and Romilies, the British cruisers Glasgow, Enterprise, and Orion and the Canadian destroyers Sioux and Algonquin also were in the fleet.)

In Washington, President Roosevelt announced that up to noon Tuesday (Eastern War Time) U. S. naval losses were two destroyers and one LST (landing ship, tanks). Entire Allied naval losses were officially described as "very light."

Rear Admiral Alan Goodrich Kirk, commander of one of the task forces, watched the mammoth operations from his flagship, the cruiser Augusta.

The other cruiser was the Tuscaloosa, commanded by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo.

The communique said naval casualties "are regarded as being very light, especially when the magnitude of the operation is taken into account."

Shore Batteries Stunned

British warships alone loosed a tornado of fire west of Le Havre, pouring 2000 tons of shells every 10 minutes with 600 ships firing everything from 4 to 16 inches, surprising and stunning shore batteries whose return fire was sporadic.

The continuous thunder of broadsides and the crash of aerial bombs filled the air, and great spurts of flame flared from the shore.

As the first wave of assault troops touched shore and fanned up the beach, the battleships and cruisers steamed on ahead to drench other sections of the coast with destruction.

The whole thing was so closely timed to keep the Germans off balance that bombs crashed down just three minutes ahead of the landing infantry. Enemy batteries went up in smoke among the sand dunes.

Six of Britain's greatest battleships moved into the Channel's narrow waters to add their devastating salvoes to the tumult.

(Merrill Mueller, NBC reporter, quoted Allied Naval Commander in Chief Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay as saying the Naval command had lost only light combat vessels in the initial operations in contrast to a 10 per cent over-all loss which had been anticipated. Ramsay, he said, termed the initial operation in putting troops ashore 100 per cent successful and said the light combat vessels lost did not affect troop landings).

A British Naval commenator, who revealed for the first time that 300 Naval vessels in amphibious exercises sailed within 10 miles of the French coast last September, said the proportion of warships was three British to one American and the over-all proportion including landing craft was three British to two American.

Could Walk Over

Airmen Tell Of Channel Boat Bridge

London, June 6 (AP).—American airmen returning from today's assault expressed amazement at the stupendous fleet of Allied craft crowding the English Channel, and fighter pilots reported no German fighter planes and scarcely any flak had been encountered up to noon.

Hundreds of Allied planes packed the air lanes. Fortresses, Liberators and medium and light bombers—many of them without escort—shuttled back and forth to drop bombs on Nazi military strongholds.

Swift fighters darted high and low to protect Allied naval craft and pave the way for the ground troops.

Barges Carpet Channel

"There were enough barges so you could walk from England to France," said Pilot Capt. Jack L. Weber, Lime Rock, Conn., "and I saw only friendly planes."

Bomber Pilot Lieut Thomas J. Czatko, Wilkes Barre, Pa., said: "There was a vast air bridge formed by the terrific mass of bombers pounding the enemy."

Maj. Bruce Parnell, Barium Springs, N. C., said that as the morning progressed the bad weather over France cleared to a ceiling of 3000 feet, enabling fighters to give close cover to the landing forces. Before that, he said, rain squalls had blanketed the approach of the troops.

"All the way from the British coast squalls were hanging 600 to 800 feet right down to the water," said Lieut. Thomas Sanford of Houston, Tex.

'Perfect Job of Timing'

"The biggest thrill I had was when four American Mustangs came to within 200 yards of me in the clouds," said Fighter Pilot Capt. Alex R. Johnston, Essex Falls, N. J. "If they had been Germans they could have easily shot me down. The way the weather held right down to the whitecaps I should say the invasion was a perfect job of timing."

Lieut. Marvin Leinweber, Walterboro, S. C., and Hondo, Tex., said that big bomber formations were stretched out across the Channel "as far as you could see."

Sergt. Harry A. Tarcza, West Winfield, N. Y., top-turret gunner on the "El Belle," related, "As we were returning from bombing I saw a huge group of naval supply ships and battleships out in the Channel. Even at our high altitude our plane was bouncing around from the horrible concussion of the naval bombardment down below. We thought we might have had an engine out."

Several pilots reported fierce opposition from ground defenses. Capt. Charles W. Schober, pilot, of Fort Lee, N. J., said, "Every Jerry in France who ha da gun has been shooting this morning."

Russians See Speedy Victory Over Germany

Moscow, June 6 (U.P.). — Word spread through Russia like a wind-whipped fire today that Anglo-American armies had landed in France, and the people exploded with a spontaneous joy seldom even accorded their own great victories.

The news came as Soviet armies themselves were poised to strike along a 2000-mile front in fulfillment of the "combined offensive from east, west and south" worked out at Teheran.

Instantly the Soviets voiced a conviction that their western Allies would smash the Germans in record time.

Moscow telephone exchanges were jammed throughout the midday hours, with citizens asking their friends for news and passing on what they had heard themselves about the landing. Russsians congratulated their Anglo-American friends.

Stalin Congratulates Churchill

London, June 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Winston Churchill received today this congratulatory message from Premier Stalin of Russia on the Allied liberation of Rome:

"I congratulate you on the great victory of the Allied Anglo-American forces in the taking of Rome. This news has been greeted in the Soviet Union with great satisfaction."

Hitler's West Wall Rammed by Allied Secret Weapons

London, June 6 (AP).—The Allied army of liberation rammed Hitler's West Wall today with many secret weapons in use for the first time.

While not disclosing the types and actual number of those weapons, the Ministry of Supply said factories had been manufacturing them for many months past under the greatest secrecy. Often workers themselves did not know what they were making.

The weapons, many so vital they were made in small parts at widely separated plants, were brought together only for final assembly.

New Regime To Be Set Up By Badoglio

Naples, June 6 (AP).—Premier Pietro Badoglio of Italy has tendered the resignation of his government to Prince Umberto, newly-designated Lieutenant General of the Realm, who has accepted and instructed Badoglio to form a new government incorporating underground political leaders now in Rome, it was announced officially tonight.

The present government will continue to function until the new government is formed, it was said. Badoglio with several of his ministers will go to Rome soon to consult on the new government with underground leaders there who mostly are unknown to the Italian general public.

Meanwhile, the official seat of Italian government will remain at Salerno, inasmuch as military necessity forbids placing Rome under Italian jurisdiction and the government naturally desires to function in its own territory.

Badoglio sent a message to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Marshal Josef Stalin expressing his appreciation and congratulations on the liberation of Rome.

D. C. Major Kept Wife in Dark On D-Day Plans

Mrs. Herbert Glick, 3002 Rodman st. nw., was preparing to write her daily airmail letter to Maj. Herbert Glick last night when The Post called to ask if she thought her husband was helping liberate Europe.

She admitted she had been reading and listening to reports about the second front all day, but, of course, wasn't sure whether or not he was in France or still "somewhere near London" with his Army Medical Corps unit.

Major Glick hadn't written any invasion news, she said. He told of visiting children's hospitals where war-shocked English children are receiving care, and spoke always of the "hospitality and the indomitable strength and courage of the English," she said.

Mrs. Glick, the former Leolia Meth, was employed by the Department of Agriculture here before her marriage. She is living here with her parents and three-year-old daughter, Leslie Ann.

Battle Terrain . . .

BEACHHEAD—Topographic map from British Information Service shows the northwest coast of France where Allied landings are reported. The main thrust reportedly hit the beaches along the Seine estuary (A), between Le Havre and Cherbourg. The German radio broadcast reports of a battle with Allied paratroopers at Caen (arrow), 9½ miles inland and the German news agency said the Allies had made "further landings at the mouth of the Orne under cover of naval artillery. An attempt to isolate the Normandy peninsula (B) is viewed as possible

Allies Pushing Inland, Says Churchill

London, June 6 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill said tonight Allied troops have penetrated in some cases several miles inland from the coast of France, and that "this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner" with losses far less than anticipated.

He said it appeared tactical surprise had been achieved over the Germans as the Allies established lodgments "on a broad front."

"The resistance of batteries has been greatly weakened by the bombing of the Air Force, and the superior bombardment of our ships greatly reduced their fire to dimensions which did not affect the problem," he said, adding that "airborne troops are well established and the followups all are proceeding with very much less loss than we expected."

"An Outstanding Feat"

He described the air-borne landings as "an outstanding feat on a scale far larger than anything there has been so far in the world. These landings took place with extremely little loss and great accuracy."

"Many dangers and difficulties which appeared at this time last night extremely formidable are behind us," Churchill said.

"All this gives no indication whatever of what may be the course of the battle in the next days and weeks, because the enemy will now probably endeavor to concentrate on this area.

"In that event, heavy fighting will soon begin, and will continue. It is therefore a most serious time that we are entering upon, and we enter upon it with our great Allies all in good heart and all in good friendship."

Many Factors Involved

"It involves the tides, wind, waves and visibility both from the air and sea standpoints and the combined employment of land, air and sea forces in the highest degree of intimacy."

Churchill hailed liberation of Rome as "a memorable and glorious event," but added the grim report that the battle of the Anzio beachhead, established last January and held against fierce counterattacks, cost the Allies 20,000 men and the Germans 25,000. The drive on Rome involved an Allied army of 150,000 men from the beachhead alone, he said.

Obey Nazi Orders, Petain Sobs Over Radio to French

London, June 6 (INS).—An old man, once the hero of Verdun, this afternoon sobbed into a microphone his demands that the people of France obey German orders and lift no finger to throw off the bondage under which they have lived for four bitter years.

His aged voice feeble and shaken with sobs, Henri Petain, 88, marshal of France and chief of the puppet Vichy Government, was scarcely audible over Paris radio as he appealed to his countrymen to maintain "the most rigorous discipline."

"Frenchmen, the German and Anglo-Saxon armies are at grips on our soil," said the dazed old voice of the man who helped lead the Anglo-Saxon and French armies to victory a quarter of a century ago.

"France is becoming a battlefield," he mumbled through sobs.

"Frenchmen, do not increase our misfortunes by deeds which might bring tragic reprisals upon you. The consequences would be borne by innocent French people."

Nazis Weakening At Iasi, Reds Hint

London, (Wednesday), June 7 (AP).—An indication that the Germans are weakening in their savage eight-day battle near Iasi, Romania, was given by Moscow early today.

Von Runstedt, Defense Chief, Expresses Scorn of Naziism

FIELD MARSHAL ERWIN ROMMEL

FIELD MARSHAL KARL VON RUNDSTEDT

These Nazi generals are opposing the Allied assault to liberate the German-dominated countries of Europe. Rommel is leader of the German armies. Von Rundstedt is commanding general of Hitler's legions in western Europe

Rommel at Front In France; Famed As Africa Leader

Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, chief of the Nazi antilanding forces under Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt, is "on the scene of developments" on the French front. The so-called "desert fox," acting as a sort of tactical field commander under Rundstedt's direction, gained fame as commander of Germany's former Afrika Korps which once smashed to within 70 miles of Alexandria, only to be chased all the way back across North Africa by Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's British Eighth Army.

Rommel commanded the tank corps which cracked the Maginot Line at Sedan in 1940. He is 52.

When Hitler rose to power he was one of the first Storm Troop leaders. By 1933 Rommel was recognized as a brilliant strategist and was named lecturer at the Potsdam Officers' School.

Rommel's selection to command the German army in North Africa undoubtedly was the direct result of his brilliant leadership in the breakthrough in France. After his Panzer Division cracked the Maginot Line it pushed forward as the spearhead of the sweep that carried the Germans to the French coast at Abbeville.

His tank corps covered 200 miles in a day and was responsible for pinning more than 1 million Allies in the Flanders pocket which had its denouement in the Dunkerque evacuation. At St. Valery, Rommel's tanks captured 25,000 British troops.

Harsh Soldier Has Ridiculed Hitler, Goebbels, Goering

Field Marshall Gen. Karl Rudolf Gerd von Rundstedt, 69, brilliant, ruthless Prussian in command of the Atlantic West Wall defenses, is known as the hight priest of German war strategy, but more than once has shown his scorn of Naziism.

Harsh, pinch-lipped, an old Hindenburg man, and an arden royalist, Von Runstedt has been quoted as saying that in his super-state there would be no room for "such rubbish as inflated lance corporals (Hitler) or a self-advertising agent filled with megalomania (Goebbels) or a dressed-up carnival clown who ought to be in a lunatic asylum (Goering)."

Born in 1875, von Rundstedt was in a cadet school at 12, was a lieutenant at 17, attended the war academy and eventually became a member of the general staff.

In World War I he was chief of staff of a Prussian army corps, serving under Crown Prince Wilhelm.

After Germany's defeat in 1918 he joined the republican army and helped Gen. Hans von Seeckt build the secret Reichswehr with the motto "Junkers above all."

He outflanked the Poles after von Bock failed with mass frontal attacks. He broke through at Sedan. He directed the lightning drive through the Ukraine in the summer of 1941.

He resigned with other generals in December, 1941, after Hitler decided to run the war intuitively but was recalled

Landing Areas, Long Selected Left Almost Without Defenses

London, June 6 (AP).—The beaches across which the Americans drove into France today were selected many months ago, but only recently did the Germans seriously start to build up the defenses there, and the attack found them far less heavily gunned and fortified than the great port areas in Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and France.

This chosen stretch remained almost without beach obstacles and the inshore defenses were nothing like as massive as those stretching for hundreds of miles on either side.

This left a breach of about 60 miles between the northern wing of the defenses keyed around the Elbe and Weser Estuaries Hook of Holland and the Ports of Dunkerque, Calais, Boulogne, Dieppe and Le Havre, and the southern chain running from Cherbourg through St. Milo, Brest, Lorient, Nantes and Bordeaux.

The low priority which kept materials and weapons away from this area and made it the Achilles Heel of the Nazi defenses was due largely to the urgent necessity for protecting every port first and also to the lack of manpower, transportation and supplies to create a continuous wall from Denmark to Spain.

Week by week through the winter, Allied reconnaissance showed the slow progress in converting scattered houses into strongpoints and fingers were kept crossed in high places as the Germans again and again showed marked signs of nervousness about this spot or that but never about the chosen stretch.

Not until Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's first extensive western inspection in February did the enemy show increased interest in these invitingly bare beaches. Even then he gave first attention to multiplying minefields in the immediate inshore areas, to lengthening and deepening antitank ditches close to the water line, to emplacement of many light field guns to fire each way along the beaches and to general improvements of the deeper defenses.

Only after the winter's storms had blown out along toward the middle of April did the four commonest types of offshore beach obstacles begin to appear. They were thick along our target areas, although still not as numerous as at many other points.

Nation Turns to Prayer on News of Landings

By the Associated Press

America received news of the landings in France calmly yesterday and turned to the altars of its faiths to pray for peace with victory.

In the Nation's hamlets and great cities people went to churches, temples and synagogues to meditate and to participate in the services of prayer scheduled for D-Day.

There were few demonstrations. Groups gathered at newsstands and stood before radio loudspeakers. Comment generally reflected the combination of hope and trepidation which marked the end of the tense waiting period.

Thousands of men and women in war production plants observed a brief moment of silence, followed by an immediate resumption of the flow of materials of war. Plant officials announced uniformly and proudly that the announcement came without a slackening of output.

In New York a public prayer observance, to be held at 5:30 p. m. at the Madison Square Eternal Light, World War I memorial, was announced, ceremonies which will be repeated in communities in all parts of the country.

Some cities, such as Albuquerque, N. Mex., announced D-Day and H-Hour with sirens and whistles, summoning men and women to their places of worship.

At the United States Veterans Hospital in New York, 1800 men still hospitalized 25 years after World War I learned the news from nurses. Patients, in pajamas and bathrobes, walking on crutches and canes, gathered on the hospital lawns and bowed in silent prayer.

Minesweepers Return First American Dead

At a Port in Southern England, June 6 (AP).—A British sailor, his young face grimy with coal dust and his dark eyes solemn, stood at attention with fixed bayonet at the head of the gangplank.

The first American dead in the assault on western Europe were being brought off minesweepers, dubbed "Smokey Joes"—the first ships out and the first back.

There were survivors, too, 19 of them "picked up at sea."

I was the only correspondent present.

Those with a job to do went down to the quay. A big truck drove up to take the survivors to a British camp. Ambulances lined up.

Watch All Comers

American soldiers on the wharf with rifles and blue arm bands marked "Security" watched all comers.

I was told not to attempt to talk to anyone getting off the ship.

The survivors are called "brief troops"—men who have been told too much, who have seen too much of the invasion plan to speak to anyone not there. They will be closely guarded until they go out again.

The first minesweeper eased up to the dock. No one cheered.

There was a call for someone from the American Medical Corps to board and Capt. Thomas Newbold, Brooklyn, N. Y., responded.

Chaplain Waiting

Standing nearby, Chaplain Meyer Miller, Greenwich, Conn., said "We saw them off—and now we see them back."

Captain Newbold returned, conferred with Capt. A. J. Marsala, Monroe, La., liaison officer between the U. S. Medical Corps and the Allied Navies.

Then the first survivor come onto deck and up the gangplank. He was a young lad with light brown hair. He wore the two-piece white pajama-like suit given men picked up at sea. Willing British hands helped him into a waiting truck.

Others came, some very tired, one stumbled, one wore borrowed Navy gear. A few wore green dungarees.

As they came ashore another minesweeper eased alongside with three survivors. One shouted as he climbed into a truck, "We made it after all."

"Bring up the ambulances," came a command. Litter bearers began placing them beside the gangplank. No one spoke.

Eisenhower Set H-Hour and D-Day, Summary Reveals

London, June 6 (U.P.).—Dwight D. Eisenhower was the man who set H-hour and D-day.

President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill approved the battle plans at Quebec in August, 1943, but selecting the exact time was left to the supreme commander.

This was stated today in a 37-page unofficial "invasion summary" written by British officers and released by the war office. The summary revealed that Roosevelt and Churchill agreed at Casablanca early in 1943 to knock Italy out of the war before invading France even though they knew this would delay the Western assault until 1944.

U. S. Landing Craft Output Tripled to Meet D-Day Task

To make the assault on Europe possible, the United States tripled its prodpction of landing craft during the last 6 months in one of the most concentrated production efforts of the war.

The priority track was cleared of interference from other urgent programs by the granting of an overriding priority to landing craft late in November, and by its subsequent extension late in December after the Teheran conference fixed the liberation strategy.

One Reason for Delay

President Roosevelt at his press conference yesterday stated that one reason the liberation venture did not take place before the present was the need to wait for enough landing craft.

From November, production climbed month by month, but lagged behind schedule until an all-out effort in the last two months made possible meeting the D-day schedules.

The overriding priority is slated to expire on July 31. Whether it will be renewed for another period will depend on the needs of war in the Pacific. More landing craft must be built to invade Japan.

Only other item to get on overriding priority this year was heavy artillery. The artillery priority which is slated to expire on June 30, probably will be renewed for additional months. In recent months, artillery production has been stepped up enormously. The guns will be needed for follow-up land tactics on the European Continent as well as against Japan.

180,000 Planes Produced

D-Day found United States production of aircraft since the attack on Pearl Harbor soaring past the 180,000 mark. Well over 1000 four-engine bombers have been produced each month for many months.

Landing craft production was one of the toughest nuts to crack because of the tremendous concentration in a few months.

About 112,000 workers are engaged exclusively in landing craft production. Much of the work is concentrated in 39 yards in New England, the Middle Atlantic States and along navigable rivers in the Middle West.

Landing Decision

Eisenhower And Weather Made History

GENERAL EISENHOWER

An Advance Command Post, Supreme Allied Headquarters, June 6 (Delayed).—Gen. Dwight Eisenhower pressed the button for the landing in France from this tented camp in the depth of the sleeping English countryside. Here in a motor trailer he is directing the first phase of history's most gigantic amphibious operation.

It was at night that the supreme commander, pink, serene and confident, made his great decision. Final weather forecast determined the choice.

The commanders met with General Eisenhower to study the deciding factors of sun, wind and visibility. Throughout "D-minus-1 day" the success of the first phase of the second front was poised on the slender apex of a meteorological machine.

Narrows Down to One Man

The whole tremendous attack narrows down to one man in dark khaki battledress—the man who is breaking the thunder and lightning over France and who strolls with casual confidence under the sprouting boughs of the English trees. He has had little sleep for many hours, but you could never guess it as you watch him striding between his office on wheels and his war room pregnant with its maps.

So smooth has been the 24 hours before H-hour that Eisenhower left his camp twice to Godspeed to his assault teams.

In the morning he "chinned" in his familiar way with the men of a British unit as they embarked from an invasion quay.

General Jests With Men

Late yesterday he was away for seven hours on a tour of airdromes where American parachute troops were preparing to take off. With casual questions, jests and cheery sallies, Eisenhower brought a last satisfied smile to faces already grim for the adventure.

As dusk fell and the air began to hum with the sound of planes carrying the first France-bound troops, he called at the headquarters of one of the airborne units. He had grown hungry during his nonstop tour of the airfields.

He relaxed, ate doughnuts and drank coffee in a great paneled hall. Outside the air was now full of Douglas airliners.

General Eisenhower walked up to the roof of the house and watched the procession in the darkening skies as the squadrons roared over him at 15-second intervals.

Allied Troops Waited a Week Aboard Ships

At least some of the troops who landed in France yesterday were aboard ships in British waters—just a few miles across the channel from their battlefields—for a week, the Army disclosed yesterday.

A dispatch written from a "front line town in England" and dated May 30 describes how the soldiers boarded blunt-nosed landing craft that day, then shifted to larger boats farther out in the harbor. Rations for use aboard the ship, not on the beaches, were put aboard, and, presumably, the men just waited while the ships were maneuvered to their proper place in the landing line-up and D-Day arrived seven days later.

Port Heavily Bombed

The port where the Americans said goodby to English soil for a long time was heavily battered by German fliers just prior to embarkation, and one veteran of Italy called it "worse than Salerno."

The story of this port was one of a number that the Army made available after official release of announcement that the landings had begun. Some of these articles were background material on geography of the landings area, and others were descriptions of previously secret operations of the last few days in England.

One Army story describes the English countryside that now is regaining its peaceful prewar appearance, with the bulk of military equipment aboard ship or at embarkation places.

From north to south and from east to west, the Army's supplies and weapons crammed the land. Hillsides were blanketed with antiaircraft guns, mighty howitzers, antitank weapons, tanks, amphibious vehicles, trucks, ambulances and bull-dozers.

Full-sized trains, built for continental tracks, had been brought to England in pieces and assembled there.

Construction of shelter for the thousands of acres of supplies was impossible. The material was hidden from German aerial observation principally through olive drab paint on the equipment itself.

A few months ago American soldiers from Africa, Sicily, Iceland and the training camps in the States jammed London. They swarmed the streets of Westminster from Hyde Park to Soho and from the Thames to just north of Oxford st. They thronged dance halls and theaters. Hotels were packed and dormitories opened in London as fast as the Red Cross could requisition buildings.

Atmosphere Changes

"Then in April," says the Army's story, "with the suddenness of a shower the atmosphere changed. Almost overnight the olive drab of the Yank uniforms seemed to vanish from the pleasure places, the clubs and the streets. It was an omen that everyone understood."

In the final days, Americans thronged the seaside towns in the marshaling areas, soldiers from every arm and service in the Army, Negro and white. But their appearance was different, the townspeople realized. The soldiers were permitted in town wearing helmets in place of the garrison cap, field jacket instead of blouse, with no necktie and with shirt open at the neck. This was battle dress; the men had turned all excess clothing and baggage back to the Army.

In these marshaling areas, there were other things to bring the closeness of the second front to the attention of the natives. At almost quarter-mile intervals along roads, thick with soldiers marching to keep their fine battle edge, were black letters on white signs, "Civilians Are Forbidden to Loiter or Talk to Troops."

Data Smuggled From France

Months of aerial photography over enemy territory and the coordination of thousands of tiny pieces of information smuggled out of France preceded the briefing of liberation soldiers at their bases in England.

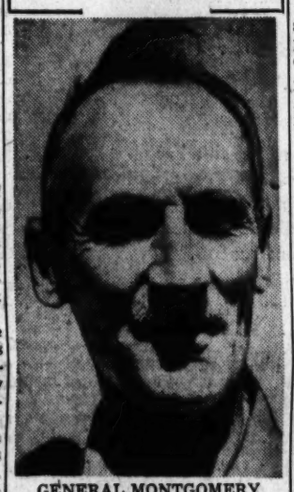
All of this information, these pictures, reached their ultimate usefulness in military maps in the hands of small and large units. A staggering total of 125 million maps went in with the attack; without them the operation could not succeed.

Swiss Fell Nazi Plane

London, June 6 (AP).—A Swiss radio broadcast said today a German 3-engine plane had been shot down over Switzerland by Swiss fighters.

Allied King Pin

Montgomery Most Colorful Of Leaders



GENERAL MONTGOMERY

Possessor of perhaps the most glittering reputation of all the Allied invasion commanders is Sir Bernard Law Montgomery, leading Allied armies in France.

Hatchet-faced, hard-fighting, hard-bitten Montgomery has been a professional soldier for 35 years. He saved Egypt by smashing Rommel's Afrika Korps at El Alamein in November, 1942, had a dominant hand in throwing the Germans out of Africa, the conquest of Sicily, and the invasion of Italy.

His cocky grin beneath his tank-corps beret is a talisman of victory. A non-drinker and non-smoker, "Monty" never overlooks his daily setting-up exercises. He will be 57 next November 17.

Son of Clergyman

London-born son of a clergyman, he quotes the Bible, and he urges his men to read it daily, as he does.

Not noted for modesty, he instills his own cocky self-confidence into his troops.

He was at Dunkerque in 1940, one of the last to leave, sitting boldly on the bridge of a British destroyer and watching unblinking as the Stuka bombs splashed all around him.

He asks and gives no quarter and often has declared, "The only way to win is to defeat the Germans on the battlefield."

"Ths war began a long while ago," the general remarked, "I am getting fed up with the thing. I think it is nearly time we finished it."

He believes Germany's Field Marshal Erwin Rommel "will commit himself on the beaches. He will try to hit us early."

Studied Rommel's Habits

The general studied the characteristics, habits and fighting methods of Rommel—he even kept a picture of the Nazi general above his table in his desert caravan.

Montgomery says the German soldier is as good as any in the world, but he believes the German high command is not up to its old standards.

"Put the German on some ground," he said, "and let him stay there long enough and it takes a bit of doing to get him off—it takes a bit of doing."

U. S. Recognizes Ecuador Regime

The United States has extended full recognition to the new government of Ecuador, established by a brief revolution May 28.

Acting Secretary of State Stettinius said in a statement yesterday that the United States has full confidence in the friendly attitude of the new Ecuadorean regime toward the cause of the United Nations and in its announced purpose to fulfill its international obligations.

Navy Fulfilled Its Schedule, Ingersoll Says

By George Connery

The Navy met its own liberation schedule of fighting craft and supplies on time; now its task is to convoy a smaller flow of "expendable items" for the Allied forces battling in France, Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander of the Atlantic Fleet, announced yesterday.

Ingersoll, who with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the fleet, attended Secretary of Navy James Forrestal's news conference, said all the war craft of the Atlantic Fleet designated for use in the liberation—from battleships to landing boats—had been delivered in Europe.

All Fire Power Used

He and Forrestal said every possible use was being made of the fire power of naval craft in the landings in France. Forrestal pointed out that in some of the Pacific operations warships had gone within 1200 yards of shore to pound Jap positions.

The Atlantic Fleet commander doesn't know how many submarines the Germans have ready or in the making to use against attacking ships, but the Navy will be ready for them, he indicated.

Convoys now carry a lot of punch of their own, the admiral said. He revealed that in one recent action in the Mediterranean, 40 German torpedo planes and bombers attacked a convoy of 100 Allied ships. The convoy put out a smoke screen and went to work on the Germans with antiaircraft guns. So effective was the defense that 18 or 20 of the attacking planes were shot down and not a ship was lost.

Ingersoll said the submarine menace had been checked in a battle of wits that meant constant change in tactics and weapons.

7000 Ships Escorted

Since 1942 our Navy in the Atlantic has escorted 7000 ships to Europe, with the loss of only 10 while under our convoy. For strategic purposes and patrol, he explained, the middle of the Atlantic is the dividing line for British and American operations. However, any convoy started out with American naval escort keeps that escort until it reaches its destination, although British forces may augment the original escort.

Also, he disclosed, a striking force under his command had been kept ready until recently to meet any possible force of German heavy units that might get into the western Atlantic.

De Gaulle Urges All Frenchmen To Resist Nazis

London, June 6 (AP).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle called by radio on his countrymen today to resist the Germans, declaring that for the sons of France, "whoever and wherever they may be, the simple, sacred duty is to fight with all means at their disposal."

Committee Members Object

Algiers, June 6 (AP).—Some members of the French National Committee voiced resentment today at the manner in which their leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, was brought to London to be faced with the accomplished fact of the Allied campaign when he had expected to confer on the civil administration of liberated territories. They asserted De Gaulle had been tricked into compliance with General Eisenhower's plans for a "fait accompli" administration in France, and added that negotiations on the administration of liberated areas of France now are pointless and obsolete.

They resented Eisenhower's broadcast to the French people in which he omitted any direct mention of the committee and asserted the French must be free to choose their own government. They felt his statement clashed with the committee's view that it already is a provisional government.

ROOSEVELT

ter Churchill, was a mouthful.

The Prime Minister had told the House of Commons that the liberation was going "according to plan—and what a plan!"

Mr. Roosevelt, in a buoyant mood, disclosed that the approximate date of the Allied attack from the west was set at the meeting of the Big Three at Teheran last December. The exact date and the place of attack, he said, was left up to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, the Allied supreme commander.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the question of a "second front" actually had come up just after Pearl Harbor—at the time when Prime Minister Churchill was here in the winter of 1941-42 and when the American and British combined chiefs of staff were holding their first meeting.

It came up again, Mr. Roosevelt said, at every war conference that followed, here and at Casablanca and at Quebec. But not until Teheran, he said, were we sure that we would have the strength that would be needed. In the past six months, he told the reporters, many more divisions have become available and many more of the vitally important landing craft.

The President thought that everybody ought to be able to see now why the Western Allies did not start the second front when so many politicians and others were shouting for it.

Last year's clamor, he said, reminded him of the American (presumably William Jennings Bryan) who said he was not worried about the defense of America—that a millon men would spring to arms overnight." The President asked, What arms? He went on to say that preparations for the current operation were far bigger and much more difficult than anybody but the military could anticipate.

A reporter, in asking the President a question, referred to the clamor for a second front that once "came from Russian sources, including Wendell Willkie." Mr. Roosevelt joined in the laughter that followed, and asked when had Wendell changed his nationality.

Telling about the Teheran Conference, the President said that the date for the attack on Europe was set for late in May or early in June, depending on the weather. He explained that this time was selected because the weather in the English Channel would be most favorable.

Mr. Roosevelt said that the Teheran Conference had cleared up Marshal Stalin's mind on the second-front question, and that he was entirely satisfied with the date agreed upon.

Asked how many people were in on the secret, the President said that the number was very small.

"Could you count them on the fingers of your hand?" a reporter asked.

No, the President replied; it was more than that—but not many more.

Mr. Roosevelt said that while he had known the approximate date since Teheran, he had known the exact date only in the last few days. He said that when he was making his radio speech on the liberation of Rome, he knew that our troops were in the boats and on their way across the English Channel.

In winding up his news conference, Mr. Roosevelt said Americans had a right to be thrilled at this historic moment, but he expressed the hope that they would not be overconfident.

He said that the war isn't over yet, and neither is the assault on France. He added that you just don't land on a beach and then march through to Berlin.

The President was in his shirt sleeves, and his dog Fala was wandering around the office, getting in between the reporters' legs. Somebody asked Mr. Roosevelt how he felt, and he replied that he was fine although a bit sleepy.

Confers With Military Chiefs

White House Secretary Early told newsmen in the morning that the President began receiving detailed reports on the cross-Channel operation at about 11:30 p. m. Monday. This was three hours after he started his Rome speech. In between the telephone calls, the President finished drafting his D-Day prayer. He went to bed and got up earlier than is his custom.

Just before noon yesterday, the President conferred with Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the Fleet and chief of naval operations, and Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces.

All three appeared to be in excellent spirits, and the usually reticent Admiral King went so far as to say that the attack on Europe was "doing all right so far."

COMMUNIQUE

ships engaged the enemy batteries which had already been subjected to bombardment from the air.

Batteries Silenced

Some of these were silenced. The Allied landings were effected under cover of air and naval bombardments and the air-borne landings involving troop-carrying aircraft and gliders carrying large forces of troops were also made successfully at a number of points.

Continuous fighter cover was maintained over the beaches and for some distance inland, and over naval operations in the Channel. Our night fighters played an equally important role in protecting shipping and the troop-carrier forces and intruder operations.

Allied reconnaissance aircraft maintained a continuous watch by day and night over shipping and the ground forces. Our aircraft met with little enemy fighter opposition or antiaircraft gunfire.

The naval casualties are regarded as being very light, especially when the magnitude of the operation is taken into account.

London (Wednesday), June 7 (AP). The Berlin radio broadcast the following German high command statement early today:

Fighting in the Cherbourg-Le Havre area is in full swing.

On the coast of northern France heavy fighting is continuing. In the area of the mouth of the Orne enemy troops are sealed off.

South of Le Havre strong airborne units have been annihilated.

New enemy operations must be expected but have not taken shape yet.

914 Middies Graduate Today

Annapolis, Md., June 6 (AP).—"Color Girl" Mary Jessup of Roslyn, N. Y., brought June Week festivities at the U. S. Naval Academy to a climax today when she presented the colors to the Championship 20th Company and bestowed the traditional victory kiss on its commander, Midshipman Robert Beresford Williams.

Midshipman Williams, member of this year's graduating class which will be commissioned into the Navy and Marine Corps tomorrow, is from Sausalito, Calif.

The annual farewell ball for all the midshipmen was held in the evening and June Week will formally close tomorrow morning when 914 graduates receive diplomas following a commencement address by the new Secretary of the Navy, James V. Forrestal.

Forrestal will be making his first important public appearance since succeeding the late Frank Knox to the secretaryship.

Shortly after the regiment formed on the parade field before an estimated 10,000 visitors prior to the presentation of colors, the regiment of midshipmen paid its traditional tribute to next year's first classmen.

Tenn. Democratic Delegation to Go Uninstructed

Nashville, Tenn., June 6 (AP).—The Tennessee Democratic convention stated in a resolution today that it "looked with favor" on a fourth-term nomination for President Roosevelt and the nomination of Gov. Prentice Cooper for Vice President, but decided to send its 26-vote delegation to the national convention without instructions.

The convention approved 20 caucus-selected district delegates and named eight at-large delegates—the latter with only three-fourths vote each—and specified that the delegation should cast Tennessee's 26 votes as a unit.

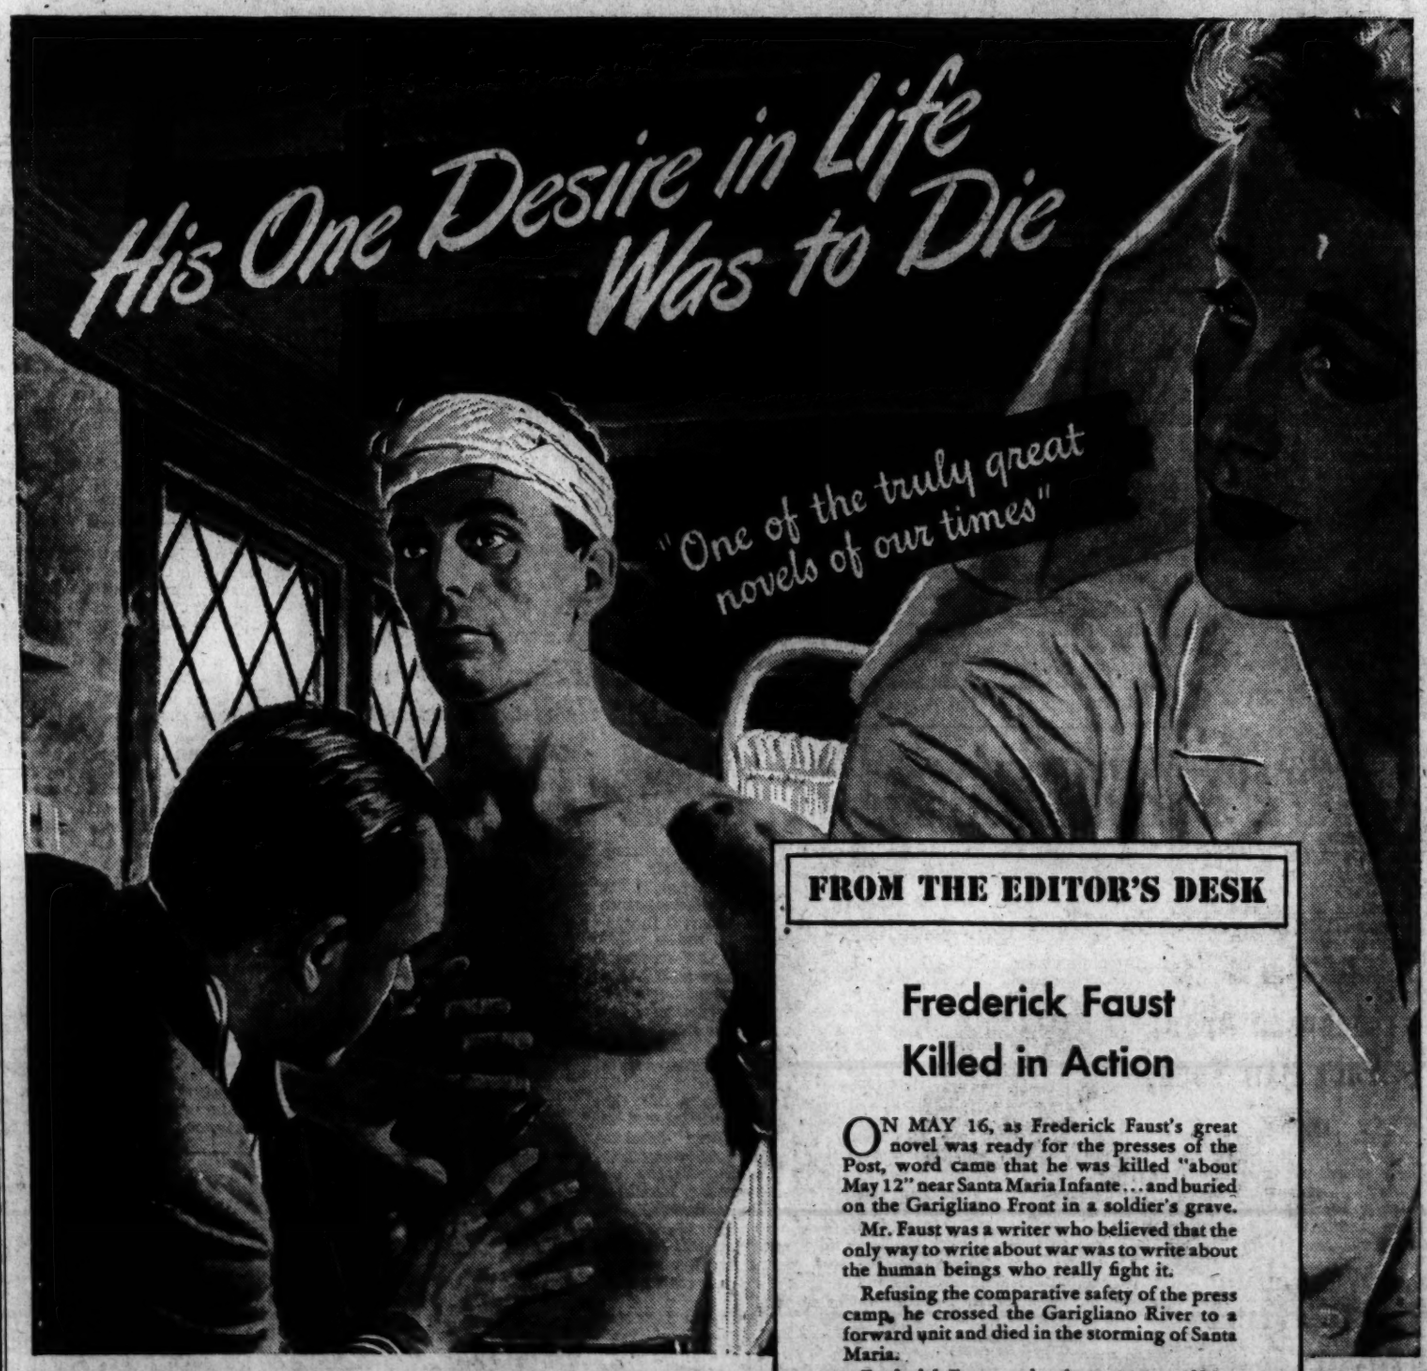
People are talking about the WAR SERIALS in the new Post



Peter Gerard wanted only to die. There was the memory of Nazis bombing Rotterdam . . . and the memory of a wife who had gone—a wife who was young and beautiful. And there was a dead look about him . . . and a dead place in his heart.

Then miraculously, Peter Gerard found his lost wife—but she had forgotten—for there was neither recognition nor love in her eyes.

Thus begins this dramatic, heart-reaching story of a young Dutch flyer caught in the relentless coils of war . . . a man who deliberately hunted death in the skies.

Frederick Faust Killed in Action

ON MAY 16, as Frederick Faust's great novel was ready for the presses of the Post, word came that he was killed "about May 12" near Santa Maria Infante . . . and buried on the Garigliano Front in a soldier's grave.

Mr. Faust was a writer who believed that the only way to write about war was to write about the human beings who really fight it.

Refusing the comparative safety of the press camp, he crossed the Garigliano River to a forward unit and died in the storming of Santa Maria.

Frederick Faust, under the pen name of Max Brand, was creator and writer of the Dr. Kildare scenarios and novels . . . war correspondent . . . soldier of the pen. It was estimated that he had produced eighty-five novels and 25,000,000 words of fiction and scenarios. He gave his life to bring the brutal realities of war closer to the hearts of the people.

With mingled pride and admiration and sorrow at his passing, the Post is privileged to publish his last and perhaps his greatest work.

War Devotions Halt Congress Controversies

With bowed heads and voices raised with their chaplains in impromptu devotions, members of the House and Senate put aside politics and contentious legislation for a full 30 minutes yesterday while they prayed for the success of the assault on the Germans.

Not until the last words of the President's prayer been read, and the last fervent appeal had been made from the floor for unity of effort and cessation of partisan politics, was the deeply religious atmosphere broken.

Then both Houses settled back into the routine business of the day which inevitably involved sharp party differences over such questions as price control methods and the early trial of Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short.

Stand in Devout Hush

Convening at 11 a. m., more than eight hours after initial landings in Europe, House members joined the Rev. James Shera Montgomery in the Lord's Prayer, and later, at the request of Majority Leader John W. McCormack, stood a moment in devout silence.

Across the Capitol the Senate, convening an hour later, also observed a period of silence, with the Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, then repeated with him the Twenty-third Psalm. Only a scattering of members were present for the opening in either house. The nearly full galleries, sprinkled with servicemen, joined in the prayers.

House Chaplain Montgomery set the theme of many of the House speeches to follow with his prayer: "We bring unto Thee our heroic sons and daughters of the battle lines who have surrendered their secret joys, their aspirations and the blessings of the years . . . comfort them in the face of all adversaries as their swords of righteousness prevail."

A moment later a clerk was reading President Roosevelt's prayer—"Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms, stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness to their faith."

Martin Addresses House

In the same vein, House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., (N. Y.) later told the House: "Partisan politics, sectional and other prejudices disappear as we think of the heroic deeds of our men and women in every part of the globe; on the land, on sea, and in the air."

Senators, many of whom had remained awake through the night listening at their radios, were slow in arriving. Only 11 were present when Senate Chaplain Harris termed the Allied blow across the Channel "the supreme hour of destiny" and called on Senators to "make this day of battle a day of prayer."

On the same note, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.) observed: "It seems that all we need, or ought to do, or can do is pray fervently for the success of our troops and those of our allies in whatever direction they may be moving."

Senator David I. Walsh (D., Mass.) obtained a copy of the President's prayer and read it to the Senate; adding: "I am sure we all say, 'Amen'."

Many members were called from the floor to the radio. In the broadcasts. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce (R., Conn.), addressed her words to the mothers. For them, she said, "time drags and crawls and creeps, and yet will not stand still."

Mrs. Williams' Slaying Inquest Is Postponed

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Inquest into the unsolved slaying of Mrs. Adele Born Williams in the Drake Hotel last January 19 was continued today to August 1, for further police investigation. Mrs. Williams, wife of a State Department attache in Washington, D. C., was fatally wounded in her hotel suite and police since have been seeking unidentified women as slayer.

Vandenberg (R., Mich.), and Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley (D., Ky.).

Navy Building Workers Hear Prayer

Capt. Stanton W. Salisbury, assistant director of Naval chaplains, offered the following prayer over the Navy Department's public address system yesterday at noon:

"O Lord God, high and mighty, Who dost by Thy will in Heaven and amongst the inhabitants of the earth stretch forth the shield of Thy most merciful protection over Thy servants and the armed forces in which they serve, lead and guide them evermore by the counsel of Thy goodness.

"Shield and defend them with Thy might that they may steadfastly continue under this Government in honor and protection to the people. In all things and at all times help them, our comrades, to acquit themselves like men, and as good soldiers of the Lord Jesus and then grant them an entrance into Thine eternal glory, through Him who is our only deliverer and the Captain of our salvation, Jesus Christ, our Lord."

President Asks Divine Grace; Wrote Prayer During Landing

This is the invasion prayer which President Roosevelt wrote while Allied troops were landing on the coast of France:

MY FELLOW AMERICANS:

In this poignant hour, I ask you to join me in prayer:

Almighty God: Our sons, pride of our Nation, this day have set upon a mighty endeavor, a struggle to preserve our republic, our religion and our civilization, and to set free a suffering humanity.

Lead them straight and true; give strength to their arms, stoutness to their hearts, steadfastness to their faith.

THEY WILL NEED Thy blessings. Their road will be long and hard. The enemy is strong. He may hurl back our forces. Success may not come with rushing speed, but we shall return again and again; and we know that by Thy grace, and by the righteousness of our cause, our sons will triumph.

They will be sore tried, by night and by day, without rest—till the victory is won. The darkness will be rent by noise and flame. Men's souls will be shaken with the violences of war.

These are men lately drawn from the ways of peace. They fight not for the lust of conquest. They fight to end conquest. They fight to liberate. They fight to let justice arise, and tolerance and goodwill among all Thy people. They yearn but for the end of battle, for their return to the haven of home.

SOME WILL NEVER RETURN. Embrace these, Father, and receive them, Thy heroic servants, into Thy kingdom.

And for us at home—fathers, mothers, children, wives, sisters, and brothers of brave men overseas, whose thoughts and prayers are ever with them—help us, Almighty God, to rededicate ourselves in renewed faith in Thee in this hour of great sacrifice.

Many people have urged that I call the Nation into a single day of special prayer. But because the road is long and the desire is great, I ask that our people devote themselves in continuance of prayer. As we rise to each new day, and again when each day is spent, let words of prayer be on our lips, invoking Thy help to our efforts.

GIVE US STRENGTH, TOO—Strength in our daily tasks, to redouble the contributions we make in the physical and material support of our armed forces.

And let our hearts be stout, to wait out the long travail, to bear sorrows that may come, to impart our courage unto our sons, wheresoever they may be.

And, O Lord, give us faith. Give us faith in Thee; faith in our sons faith in each other; faith in our united crusade. Let not the keeness of our spirit ever be dulled. Let not the impacts of temporary events, of temporal matters of but fleeting moment—let not these deter us in our unconquerable purpose.

WITH THY BLESSING, we shall prevail over the unholy forces of our enemy. Help us to conquer the apostles of greed and racial arrogances. Lead us to the saving of our country, and with our sister nations into a world unity that will spell a sure peace—a peace invulnerable to the schemes of unworthy men. And a peace that will let all men live in freedom, reaping the just rewards of their honest toil.

Thy will be done, Almighty God.

Amen.

Mosquito Invasion Blamed on Canal

Hancock, Md., June 6 (Spl.).—Mayor Omar N. Carryer said he has been swamped with complaints due to one of the worst invasion of mosquitoes in years.

The old C. & O., now the property of the Federal Government, with its pools of stagnant water paralleling the length of the town, is one of the principal breeding places, said the mayor.

"However, since the canal bed is the property of the Federal Government it is hardly within the province of the town officials to take steps to clean it up," said Carryer.

Russia Expedites U. S. Supplies for Jap Prisoners

The Soviet government has agreed to permit a Japanese ship to enter a specified Russian port near Vladivostok to pick up relief supplies for American prisoners in the Orient.

In making this announcement yesterday, the State Department said stocks of supplies sent to Russia last year have been awaiting transportation, and it is hoped they will be distributed in the near future.

Moscow also offered to forward the supplies to the Japanese overland, presumably through Manchuria, and named another port near Vladivostok where the Japanese can pick up future shipments which will be sent from the United States through Russia.

The Japanese government has been informed of Russia's offer through the Swiss government, the State Department said, and word now is awaited from Tokyo that arrangements have been completed.

MEMORY

What more perfect tribute can we give to the memory of our loved ones than the dignified, unhurried rites of our forefathers?

There is comfort in the thought that America takes time from her war filled days to revere the memory of those who go before.

The same high quality of service is as available now as always.

U. S.-Chinese Units Take Myitkyina Position

Kandy, Ceylon, June 6 (U.P.)—American and Chinese troops have captured a Japanese position at the northern edge of Myitkyina in northern Burma and have destroyed strong defenses south and southwest of the besieged stronghold, a southeast Asia command communique said today.

Other Allied units further squeezed the virtually trapped Japanese in the Mogaung valley, west of Myitkyina, by capturing Tangaoyan village, south of Kansi, 27 miles northwest of Kamaing. Chinese troops also established a road block south of Tiangzup.

Official reports from Chungking said Chinese troops who established a block on the main Mogaung valley road south of Kamaing had seized Seton, only five miles from the former enemy headquarters town.

On the Manipur front in India British imperial forces ousted the Japanese from several positions east and north of Kohima.

Bangkok's Heaviest Blow

Calcutta, June 6 (U.P.)—Strong forces of United States heavy bombers smashed the Siamese capital of Bangkok with its heaviest blow of the war yesterday, raining explosives and incendiaries on railway shops and freight yards, an announcement from Maj. Gen. George E. Stratemeyer's Eastern Air Command Headquarters said today.

The bomber formations caught the city's defenses apparently by surprise.

Generals' Wives Broadcast 'Good Luck,' Resume War Tasks

By Anne Hagner

The wives of four men upon whose shoulders rests much of the responsibility for the success of Europe's liberation were calm, clear-eyed and quick to make light of the myriad thoughts racing through their minds yesterday as they listened to the early news of D-Day.

They were Mrs. Harold Stark, wife of the commander of United States naval forces in Europe; Mrs. James Doolittle, wife of the commander of the Eighth Air Force; Mrs. Carl Spaatz, whose husband commands our Strategic Air Force in Great Britain, and Mrs. Alan G. Kirk, wife of our naval invasion task forces head.

In a comfortable studio at the National Broadcasting Co., the four women broadcast messages of "good luck and Godspeed," then sat quietly near a radio amplifier to hear subsequent reports filtering in from the front.

All four had been awakened between 2:30 and 3 a. m. by Mary Cavanaugh, NBC news reporter, to learn that H-hour had arrived. And although not one had managed another wink of sleep, all were as bright-eyed and cheery as if their husbands were leading maneuvers in the Carolinas, or operating from the Pentagon.

"I feel so sorry for the young paratrooper whose story just came over the air," commented Mrs. Kirk. "He was all ready to jump out of a plane on the invasion coast when one of his buddies accidentally hit against him and knocked him unconscious. When he came to, the plane was on its way back to England—and now he fears that the rest of the boys will think that he's yellow."

"Naturally the mother of every paratrooper overseas will be thinking that her boy was the one," said Mrs. Spaatz.

"Of course he'll be given another chance right away," Mrs. Stark interposed.

Had No Hint of Date

Their talk was all invasion, but there was no mention of anxiety or jangled nerves. None of them had any indication from their famous husbands of the impending attack; mail from England has been particularly slow of late, as D-Day grew closer, and besides that, generals and admirals cannot confide in their wives any more than—or as much as—a private first class.

As the news broadcasts became repetitious, the ladies adjourned to go about their several tasks—Mrs. Stark to her home in picturesque Spring Valley, where she and other Red Cross volunteers spent the afternoon listening to the radio and rolling surgical dressings; Mrs. Kirk to her desk in the Office of Censorship; Mrs. Spaatz to a meeting of the National Symphony Orchestra sustaining fund committee; Mrs. Doolittle to a series of volunteer tasks.

Mrs. Frank J. McSherry, whose husband, Brigadier General McSherry, is administrator of Allied Military Government and earlier has landed with invasion troops in Sicily and Naples, yesterday went to church early with two of her four children and then concentrated on listening to the radio.

"No jittery nerves here," she reported. "I think that going to church really has calmed all of us down more than anything else."

The generals' ladies, even as you and you, know how to take it.

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Sears Roebuck & Co. today reported sales for the month of May, 1944, amounted to $81,810,333, as compared with $66,746,068 for the same month a year ago.

For the four months ended May 31, 1944, sales were $296,007,928, as compared with $264,267,874 for the same period in 1943.

2 Brothers Drown In Vain Effort to Rescue Playmate

Three boys, two of them brothers, were drowned yesterday when the brothers made an unsuccessful attempt to rescue a companion in the Anacostia River at the foot of ½ st. nw.

The brothers, James and Leon Hawthorne, Negroes, 12 and 10, respectively, of 809 2nd st. se. heard the cries of Earl Hines, 8, Negro of 209 Virginia ave. se., as he struggled in the water. They swam to the rescue, only to be carried away by the current.

According to the police the boys and three other companions had gone swimming after school. Hines, the youngest of the group, and a poor swimmer, went out too far and was dragged down.

Calls from the other boys brought Harbor Precinct police, but it was too late. Police were dragging the river last night in an effort to recover the bodies.

Coffee Cups Used to Beat Off Boarding Party From U-Boat

Coffee cups were among weapons used by American destroyer crew men to repel a boarding attempt of a German U-boat crew, Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll, commander of the Atlantic Fleet, related yesterday at a new conference.

The destroyer, which he did not identify, rammed the submarine and rode up onto her decks. Then, he said, members of the U-boat's crew poured out of the conning tower and attempted to board the destroyer. The destroyer crew "opened up with everything, including coffee cups," he said, in the fight to repel the boarders. The cups bounced off the heads of some of the German crewmen during the sharp and desperate fight.

The only casualty to the American crew, he said, came "when a husky seaman bruised his fist in knocking an enemy seaman over the side."

Then the destroyer backed off, rode up again to drop depth charges and in the second attack an American seaman tossed a grenade into the submarine's conning tower. The U-boat roared into flames and sank.

2 Vatican Nazis Reported Missing

Vatican City, June 6 (AP).—Two members of the staff of the German Embassy to the Holy See today were reported missing by the semi-official Vatican news bulletin. They were Minister Wemmer and Counselor von Kessel.

The bulletin said Wemmer last was seen being taken away for questioning by an American officer who came upon him in the city of Rome.

Mrs. Eisenhower 'Excited' by Landings

New York, June 6 (AP).—The New York Post, in a copyrighted story, said today that Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower, wife of the supreme commander of the Allied Forces, greeted news of the landings early this morning with, "Why, that's wonderful! I'm so excited."

A Post reported telephoned Mrs. Eisenhower at the Thayer Hotel at West Point, where she attended the graduation today of her son, John, from the Military Academy.

"I WISH, for their own sakes," said Billy the Bus, "that people would regard the curb line as the Danger Line."

"They should be all painted white, perhaps," said Tilly the Trolley, on the practical side.

"When they cross against lights," Billy went on, "it's mighty dangerous. When vehicles are going 20 miles per hour they're moving at 30 feet a second. That's fast compared to a walker."

"How fast does a walker walk?" asked Tilly.

"If he's in a hurry," said Billy, wrinkling his front fender, "he may hit 4 miles an hour, or 6 feet a second. In other words, only about one-fifth as fast as a vehicle making 20 miles an hour."

"Goodness," said Tilly. "I'd wait. Wouldn't YOU?"

Jap Columns Meet, Launch Third Battle for Changsha

Chungking, June 6 (U.P.).—The fourth battle of Changsha opened yesterday as Japanese troops, advancing along several routes, reached the outer defenses of the key Hunan Province stronghold, the Chinese high command announced tonight.

Three times in the past six years the Chinese have hurled back the invaders from the gates of the city, barring enemy control of the Hankow-Canton railroad, but the latest Japanese offensive appeared the most determined of all.

One Japanese column reached Changsha's outskirts after pushing down the roadbed of the Hankow-Canton railroad from captured Kweiyi, while another enemy spearhead advanced from Pingkiang, 50 miles northeast of Changsha.

On the left flank of the central China front the invaders broke into Yuankiang, on the south shore of Lake Tungting 50 miles northwest of Changsha, the communique said, and were attacking Yiyang, Tzu River town 48 miles northwest of the Hunan capital.

Lieut. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced that 14th U. S. Air Force fliers supporting the Chinese defenders attacked a Japanese motor fleet in Lake Tungting and also hit Pingkiang.

'Sitdown' Reported At Celanese Plant

Cumberland, Md., June 6 (AP).—A "sitdown" strike among employes of the service department of the Cumberland plant of the Celanese Corporation of America, occurred today.

Fred T. Small, plant manager, said he did not know the cause of the strike or how many were involved. Officials of local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, made no comment other than that a meeting was being planned to discuss the grievances.

Union leaders said a number of grievances at the plant remained unsettled and J. E. Kelley, Federal conciliator, is expected here tomorrow to help iron out the problems.

Volunteers Sought To Can Corn Crop

Frederick, Md., June 6 (Spl.).—Plans were made here today to mobilize all available labor to can the Frederick County corn crop this year. An appeal is being directed to all manufacturers, business concerns and other employers to secure the service of 500 additional full and part-time workers for the canneries. It was pointed out that about 1250 employes are needed to man the factories and about 750 have been secured to date.

Widely Publicized Landing Best-Kept Secret

By Ned Russel
Copyright by N. Y. Tribune

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Forces, June 6.—The Allied landings on the coast of Normandy today were the best-kept and yet, paradoxically, the most widely advertised secret of this war.

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's public relations officers, in charge of nearly 400 war correspondents, kept all of them and presumably the enemy guessing constantly as to when D-Day would be. Batches of correspondents were rushed secretly out of London several times and then brought back in order to confuse the enemy agents who obviously would be watching the movements of correspondents scheduled to go with the invading forces.

The need for having many headquarters and Government offices fully staffed from about midnight last night presented a complex problem to the security officials who did not want to give junior officers or employes the slightest inkling that the exact hour was at hand. These officers and workers who were not entitled to be "in the know" beforehand, were summoned to their offices at midnight "because President Roosevelt is making an important speech." When they came, sleepy-eyed and bewildered to their quarters, they were locked in rooms and told they could not leave for the rest of the night.

U. S. General Broken

There has been remarkably little "careless talk" in London in the past few months. The few violators of confidences were dealt with ruthlessly. One American general was "broken" for talking too much at a party. Generally, however, the Americans semed to have learned the vital importance of silence as they became more involved in the war.

The ban on all diplomatic communications for foreign government representatives except the Russians, Americans and British, drew vigorous complaints from embassies, legations and the exiled governments here and worked many hardships on them. It is believed that the ban will be maintained for some time, however, in view of the possibility that more landings will be made. Security will continue to be of the utmost importance until the whole pattern of the invasion is clear.

Is there a shortage of children's shoes?

America's largest manufacturer of children's shoes answers this vital wartime question

Yes, there is very definitely a shortage! This is particularly true of dependable brands of medium and better quality children's shoes.

Parents today are demanding better quality. Rationing has brought about a keen appreciation of the difference between shoes that are good, and those that merely look good.

Why is there a shortage of children's shoes?

The nation's military demands and the needs of our allies have caused a decrease in the supply of leather available for civilian use and thus fewer leather shoes are being made for men and women, as well as for children. However, there is a sufficient quantity of good, serviceable shoe material available to meet essential civilian requirements.

While fewer pairs of children's shoes have been made since the war started, the demand has actually been greater and the shortage is felt more acutely for the following reasons:

1. Children wear out their shoes more quickly than do adults. And because children also outgrow their shoes, they seldom have extra pairs in reserve.
2. The rubber shortage has severely limited the number of tennis shoes available to boys and girls . . . this has added to the demand for leather shoes.
3. A sharp increase in the birth rate each year for the past three years has also put a heavier demand on leather required for additional babies' shoes.

Has the Government taken steps to make possible an increase in children's shoe production?

Yes . . . the Government has recently effected ways and means to increase the allocation and production of leather for children's shoes. This will make more leather available and enough shoes should be produced to cover necessary replacements for children. However, to provide substantial increases in the leather supply will take time.

What should I do to make my children's shoes last longer?

1. Always clean shoes thoroughly and treat them frequently with a good polish to preserve the uppers.
2. When shoes get wet, stuff the toes with cloth or paper to preserve their shape, and dry them away from excessive heat. After they're thoroughly dry, apply polish or other leather preservative.
3. At the earliest indication of needed repairs, take shoes (if still the correct size) to the repairman. Don't wait until it's too late and the shoes are beyond repair.
4. Alternate the wearing of new shoes and older ones . . . provided the older pair is still large enough.
5. See that rubbers or galoshes are worn (when available) in wet weather.

How can I be sure my children's feet are properly fitted?

Good shoes are made in the correct shapes for growing feet . . . built to stay that way . . . but your dealer does the actual fitting . . . so be sure you go to a reliable dealer.

The range of sizes and widths your dealer has in this emergency may not be as complete as he would like . . . so if he is unable to furnish the exact size in the style you prefer, we suggest that you select another pattern in the correct size that will serve your purpose. Never buy shoes too small . . . remember they must give longer service now . . . so allow ample room for feet to grow.

What are shoe manufacturers doing to produce more children's shoes?

In some instances production is being diverted from men's and women's shoes into children's shoes. Some manufacturers who in the past have made only adult shoes are now devoting part of their facilities to the production of shoes for children.

What is the International Shoe Company doing about this children's shoe problem?

As America's largest manufacturer of children's shoes, we are now producing a great many more pairs than we did a year ago. We expect to maintain this higher rate of production and, if possible, increase it.

But . . . in our endeavor to make more children's shoes we will not disregard quality . . . we are determined not to use present conditions as an excuse for lowering the moral standards of our product . . . standards that we have maintained for more than forty years.

We shall continue to make shoes that are worthy of your complete trust . . . that are constructed, inside and out, to give your children real protection during the vital years while their feet are developing.

You'll know these trustworthy shoes by the familiar brands and trade-marks reproduced below.

Union Demands That GMC Fire 5 Veterans Who Allowed Their Memberships to Lapse

By Ben W. Gilbert

Detroit, June 6—The United Automobile Workers (CIO) has asked the General Motors Corp. to fire five war veterans who belonged to the union before entering service, but failed to maintain their union membership after getting their old jobs back on discharge from the armed services.

The company believes that the union has asked it to violate the reemployment provisions of the Selective Service and Training Act and has decided to resist the demand unless ordered to do otherwise by the War Labor Board.

The question arose under a maintenance of membership clause incorporated in a GMC-UAW contract late in 1942 by order of the War Labor Board.

Expected to Be Test Cases

Similar questions have begun to arise under other maintenance of membership clauses incorporated in collective bargaining contracts by WLB and the GMC cases are expected to provide important tests of their application.

Underlying the dispute is the whole question of the relationship of organized labor and ex-servicemen during the reconversion period and after the war.

The servicemen involved were union members when the original contract was put into effect. They became subject to maintenance of membership by failing to withdraw from the union during a 15-day "escape period" provided by WLB at the outset. Subsequently, they entered service and were placed on a non-dues paying status by the union.

When they were returned to civilian life, the UAW put them back on the books as active union members, but they failed to pay their dues, dropping into bad standing 60 days later.

Question of "Due Cause"

Under the Selective Service Act, employers are required to give war veterans their old jobs or the equivalent back, and are forbidden to discharge them, except for cause, for a period of one year.

The UAW demand immediately raised the question: Is failure to maintain union membership due "cause" under the draft law?

GMC officials agree that a war veteran would be subject to discharge if he paid any dues to the union upon his return to civilian life, but not if he paid no dues after entering service. Veterans who never belonged to the union would be unaffected.

The Selective Service system has ruled that labor agreements cannot operate in conflict wtih the draft law, but draft officials admit that the question probably will have to be adjudicated in the courts.

Agreement Extended

The GMC agreement expired late last year, but has been extended indefinitely by the War Labor Board pending a ruling on conflicting demands which arose during the negotiation of a new agreement.

Under War Labor Board policy, renewal of the maintenance of membership clause may be expected with provision for another 15-day "escape" period. As applied in previous cases, however, delinquent members who desire to "escape" during this period would normally be required to pay up back dues to the union before being permitted to withdraw.

Gripsholm Arrives At Jersey City With 131 Repatriates

Jersey City, N. J., June 6 (AP).—The sixth diplomatic exchange of repatriates between the United States and Axis countries were completed today when the Swedish liner Gripsholm arrived here with 131 passengers, 51 of them ill or wounded American soldiers who were prisoners of war in Germany.

The liner docked after a nine-day voyage from Belfast, which Navy officials said was without incident. She left here May 2, carrying 700 German prisoners and civilians who were exchanged at Barcelona. In addition to the American soldiers, she also brought back 37 Canadian soldiers and 43 civilians.

The American soldiers, first to disembark, were smiling and appeared in high humor. Most of the doughboys walked down the gangplank unassisted.

Of the civilian repatriates, only eight were United States citizens, including Larry Allen, Associated Press reporter.

Motorman Held, Driver Is Freed At Two Inquests

A Capital Transit Co. motorman was ordered held for the action of Municipal Court while the driver of an auto was exonerated yesterday at coroner's inquests in the death of two persons in March traffic accidents.

Ordered held under the negligent homicide act was Wilmer C. Moore, 42, of 646 F st. sw., who was operating a streetcar when it collided with an automobile on March 21. Alfred B. Hodge, 35, of 2920 8th st. ne., operator of the automobile, was killed instantly in the accident.

Jose Chisholm, 61, Negro, of 453 N st. nw., was exonerated in the death of three-month-old Allen Burgess, Negro, of 2227 12th pl. nw. The child died on March 19, less than 24 hours after he was injured when a car in which he was riding and which was operated by Chisholm struck a tree in the 1800 block of 11th st. nw.

National Airlines Issue Is Offered

Lehman Bros. will offer today 113,333 1-3 shares of National Airlines, Inc., common stock, $1 par value, priced at $13.75 a share.

The issue will provide the company with working capital for expansion. The Civil Aeronautics Board has already granted the company authority to establish a new route between its home terminal at Jacksonville, Fla., and New York City, and this will be inaugurated as soon as additional flying and ground equipment are available. The company also plans to expand its present routes.

Lightning Starts Fire That Destroys 15,000 Chickens

An estimated 15,000 chickens, destined for the Washington markets, were destroyed last night in a fire which gutted the poultry houses belonging to the Chrysler farm at Warrenton, Va.

Officials said that lightning had struck the building during a severe thunderstorm. The bolt also struck an apartment occupied by Elbert E. Van Pelt, a Chrysler employe, who abandoned the structure with his wife and four-year-old daughter. No one was hurt.

WORKING TO WIN ON THE HOME FRONT

Truck operators certainly deserve a big hand for seeing that a steady stream of supplies reach war plants and battle lines. On the farm front, trucks haul 98 per cent of the crop at some stage of the trip to market. On the industrial front, trucks move a large share of both raw materials and finished products. Your trucks are vital weapons of supply and should be "kept fit to fight" with GMC's Preventive Maintenance.

D. C. Area Man Held Prisoner By Nazis, Another Is Wounded

One Washington area man has been wounded in action, one previously reported missing is a prisoner, and the brother of a Washington man has been killed, it was learned here yesterday.

Sergt. Donald Ege, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Ege of 3520 South 6th st., Arlington, was wounded on May 20 in New Guinea.

Lieut. Gabriel R. Dumaine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Dumaine of Fairfax, who was reported missing on April 21, is a prisoner in Germany.

Ensign Harold L. Dominey, whose brother, Lieut. J. B. Dominey, lives at 221 Newcomb st. se., was killed Monday when two torpedo bombers crashed into the ocean off Miami Beach.

A native of the District, Cergeant Ege, 23, served as a Post carrier boy while attending Washington-Lee High School. Prior to entering the Army in November, 1942, he was employed in the office of the Adjutant General at the War Department. He was sent oversas last January with an Army Air Forces ground crew. A brother, Pvt. Philip Ege, 21, is with a tank destroyer battalion, and his brother-in-law, Corpl. Andrew Korbe, is with a medical unit attached to an amphibious task force. Both have been stationed in England.

Lieutenant Dumaine, Maurauder bomber pilot, attended the Sidwell Friends and Woodward schools here and was graduated from the Fairfax High School. He enlisted in the Canadian Air Force in 1941 and transferred to the USAAF the following year.

Ensign Dominey, whose brother is stationed at the Naval Air Station here, received his wings a month ago. In the crash in which he lost his life, another flier was killed, one is missing and one was saved.

Officers Are Elected By District Bar Group

Clarence A. Miller was elected chairman of the administrative law section of the District Bar Association last night at an informal meeting held at the home of Leonard Caldwell, 2900 Cleveland ave. nw., outgoing chairman. The term of office is one year.

Others elected were: Vice chairman, J. Craig Peacock; secretary, Ralph A. Cusick; council members, Guilford S. Jameson, E. Barrett Prettyman, H. C. Kilpatrick and Frederick P. Lee. Chairman of the committee making the nominations was R. S. Doyle.

Montgomery Sped Troops With His 'Good Hunting!'

London, June 6 (U.P.).—Gen. Sir B. L. Montgomery in a landing-eve message told his troops "the time has come to deal the enemy a terrific blow in western Europe.

"In the better days that lie ahead men will speak with pride of our doings. . . . Let us pray that the Lord mighty in battle will go forward with our armies, and that His special providence will aid us in the struggle," he said. "With stout heart, and with enthusiasm for the contest, let us go forward to victory. . . . Good hunting on the mainland of Europe!"

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Battle-Scarred Veterans at Walter Reed Bury Talk of D-Day Amid V-Day Plans

By Elizabeth Henney

There was peace in the wards at Walter Reed. There was no D-Day there. For those on the hospital cots, in the wheel chairs, or sitting on the warm lawn their D-Day had come and gone. There was no talk of war, there was no evidence of war, except for the soldier who was suddenly wheeled down the corridor toward the emergency room, his helmet by his side on the litter.

In one ward a movie was being shown; in the Red Cross hall someone was playing softly on the piano while soldiers in their "reds" or convalescent hosptial pajamas lounged around in the chairs or played checkers.

Officer Minus One Leg

Down a long corridor in the main hospital came a tall, halting figure on crutches, an officer, minus one leg, who had just been released from a prison camp in Germany.

In a bright, sunny ward a nurse stood at the head of a bed, an orderly beside her. At the foot of the bed sat an anxious-faced young woman in a red-and-white checked gingham, looking first at the still figure in the bed and then at the nurse as if to read some sign in the attendant's expression.

Up in the amputation ward Sergt. Tony Falbo, who uses hooks for the two hands he lost in Australia, was telephoning to his mother back in Montgomery, W. Va. It was part of the ceremony inaugurating the new bedside telephone service which began yesterday at the hospital. And that was one of the big excitements in the hospital on D-Day, that in six wards 260 patients can now make and receive calls from the home folks right in their beds, and that within a month all 40 wards will have that service for nearly 3000 boys.

That was important to the boys at Walter Reed yesterday, that they could hear again the voices of those they loved.

Trying to Forget War

No, they didn't talk of war. They were trying to forget it. There in the cloistered quiet of the big hospital, those who had given all of their strength were knitting together the broken fragments of their lives and bodies.

And yet it was not a scene to evoke pity and tears. As you looked into the smiling faces, noted the courageous set of the shoulders, and the confidence with which they tackled the jobs of relearning to walk or use machinery in place of hands it left you with the feeling that these boys, having finished their part in the war and left it in competent hands, were now building themselves for their part in the peace; and that that part would be good.

For them D-Day had ended and V-Day had begun.

Swiss Woman Is U. S. Citizen Following Delay

After a previous disappointment in which her naturalization papers failed to come through in time for the ceremony at United States District Court in Alexandria last December, Mrs. Clara Bertha Hino of Groveton, Fairfax County, a native of Switzerland, was among those admitted as citizens yesterday.

Mrs. Hino came to the United States in 1920 and is the wife of Thomas Kiichi Hino, Japanese-born butler now employed here by the former American Ambassador to Japan, Joseph Grew. Hino, who came to the United States in 1904 and was for 30 years steward of the Engineer Mess Officers' Club at Washington Barracks and later at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Forrestal, Patterson Call Present No Time for Strikes, Profit Quarrels

By Jean Craighead

Secretary of the Navy Forrestal and Undersecretary of War Patterson asserted last night that with "our boys fighting into France" this is no time for strikes or quarrels over profits.

The two officials said in a joint statement:

"Our behavior on the home front at this critical hour will determine whether we can look those boys squarely in the eye when they come back home."

On the morning of the Allied D-Day, approximately 17,000 workers were idle in scattered labor disputes, but the flash that woke the country sent some 4000 back to work, and with the exception of a solitary short-lived strike in Detroit, the Nation's workers remained on the job, reports indicated.

The average number of new strikes during March, a high month, was 10 a day and lasted on the average three days, the Bureau of Labor Statistics stated. Yesterday, there was one, and that was settled almost immediately.

In Washington, CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green pledged that violation of the no-strike agreement of labor would not be tolerated and asked labor to stick to their jobs.

"Let not one minute be lost for any reason," Philip Murray said, "that might be used to keep the stream of supplies and weapons flowing without interruption to every far-flung battlefront until our final victory is assured."

In addressing the presidents of all affiliated unions Green said, "Now, until Hitler is crushed, every worker enrolled in the army of production must consider himself part of the invasion forces of the United States and conduct himself accordingly."

War Labor Board and Conciliation Service reports showed that only six strikes were in government hands during the day.

Yesterday morning 500 workers at the National Car Loading Co., Chicago, Ill. ended their strike and returned to work early in the day.

A strike occurred in the Curtis-Wright plant at Lockland, Ohio, Monday night, when 12,004 United Automobile Workers (CIO) refused to return to work over a dispute involving the upgrading of Negro employes.

The Timkin Roller Bearing Co. at Canton, Ohio, reported nearly 1000 CIO unionists had not returned to their posts yesterday at Toledo, 450 bakery employes were still away from their work. The Pullman Standard Car Co. at Bessemer, Ala., stated that approximately 1000 United States Steel Workers (CIO) had not reported to work since June 1.

At the Greig Manufacturing Co., St. Paul, 87 were still out, and 600 textile workers at the Botany Worsted Mills, Passaic, N. J., remained away from their jobs. About 1000 teamsters at the Rock, Sand & Gravel Co., Los Angeles, Calif., still remained away from their posts, according to the last reports of the WLB.

Make YOUR Attack with War Bonds!

NOW is the time of the Big Push!
NOW is the time to drive on to Victory!
Our boys are doing their part with bombs, bullets, bravery . . . and blood.
You must do YOUR part . . . with bonds!
The War Bonds you buy pay for the tools of war. They help block inflation. They are an investment in the future.
But, perhaps most of all, they tell our fighting men that we at home do care . . . and do share!
Send them that message. Make it strong. Make it clear. Let it be heard around the world.
The hour of decision is at hand. The march of triumph is on.

before dawn Tuesday under a screen of bombs and shells from 4000 warships and 11,000 warplanes.

The Allied high command disclosed that more than 1000 troop-carrying aircraft, including gliders, bore fighting specialists on their missions and said this phase was executed with "unexpected success."

Naval Casualties Light

Naval casualties were officially regarded as "very light."

It was disclosed that among the Allied armada was the USS Nevada, 29,000-ton battleship, repaired after she was badly damaged at Pearl Harbor.

The USS Augusta, 9050-ton heavy cruiser on which Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt signed the Atlantic Charter, went into the action as the flagship of Rear Admiral Alan G. Kirk, a veteran of the Sicilian campaign, who commands "the western naval task force."

Another American cruiser involved was the 9975-ton Tuscaloosa, commanded by Rear Admiral Morton L. Deyo.

The U. S. Ninth Air Force alone flew 4000 sorties yesterday. Clearing the way for ground troops, 10,000 tons of explosives crashed down upon the German positions from the air, among them some described in a field dispatch as "huge bombs of a mysterious type."

Troops Get Seasick

A British naval officer, who acompanied the task forces, said the supreme command was "still worried about the weather" and that there had been much seasickness among the invasion forces. The wind over the Channel grew stronger during the night.

The German high command in a special late communique declared that "fighting in the Cherbourg-Le Havre area is in full swing. South of Le Havre strong air-borne units have been annihilated. New enemy operations must be expected but have not taken shape yet. Fighting is extremely fierce everywhere as the Anglo-Americans are putting up a most tenacious resistance."

"It must be admitted," said the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio, "that the Allied beachhead area has been considerably widened and that Allied reinforcements are pouring in."

First Wounded Return

The first of the Allied wounded were returned to England. Despite injuries, many were smiling and cheerful.

Headquarters officers, reticent about the progress of sea landings, expressed themselves as more than satisfied with the air-borne attack, contradicting a German high command claim shortly after midnight that the defenders had annihiliated strong air-borne units.

The German News Agency declared Allied parachute troops landed between Carentan and Bayeux, 27 miles apart in the western zone of operations, "as well as air-borne and sea-borne troops, have been driven back in very heavy fighting."

Heavy Fighting Reported

The German radio said that "in the area south of Cherbourg a British-American air-borne division was engaged in heavy fighting with German anti-invasion forces."

(CBS quoted a Berlin broadcast as saying that "a strong formation" of Allied parachute troops had gained lodgments on both sides of the road from Carentan to Valognes, a highway junction point 11 miles southeast of Cherbourg.

(A BBC correspondent was quoted as saying Allied forces had pushed 13 miles inland in the Caen area.)

Swedish correspondents in Berlin reported that the German high command expected "new and larger landings" overnight and said the invasion front stretched more than 200 miles from Calais to the Channel islands. Several divisions were said to be fighting in the big bridgehead, in some cases hand to hand.

There were indications that the Germans were losing touch with their battle groups and that they were not sure where the main force of the Allied assault was striking.

At a late hour last night, hundreds of Allied planes still were in the air, guarding the convoys and the beachheads and striking beyond the zone of operations to paralyze Nazi defense positions and communications.

Allie losses in the initial assault were much lighter than had been anticipated and ther was an unmistakable air of optimism at the headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme Allied commander.

Last night the International Information Bureau, German propaganda agency, reported the Allies held a bridgehead about 15 miles broad and "several kilometers" deep between Villers and Trouville. Trouville is 9 miles directly south across the Seine estuary from Le Havre.

German reporters from the Spanish frontier said Allied troops were in full possession of Honfleur, 6 miles southeast of Le Havre across the Seine estuary, and were fanning out south and east toward Pont L'Eveque, Beuzeville and Pont Audemer, ranging from 10 to 15 miles inland.

Several Bridges Captured

Prime Minister Churchill announced that Allied air-borne troops had captured several strategic bridges inside France before the enemy could destroy them and that "there is even fighting proceeding in the town of Caen." Caen is 9 miles inland near the base of the Cherbourg Peninsula, west and slightly south of Le Havre.

"Air-borne troops are well established and the followups are proceeding with very much less loss than we expected," Churchill told a cheering House of Commons in his second report of the day.

The German-controlled Paris radio broadcast a "last-minute flash from the battlefield" early last night, saying that "a vicious battle is raging north of Rouen between powerful Allied paratroop formations and German anti-invasion forces." Rouen is 61 miles from the coast, east of Le Havre.

Parachute and glider-borne troops who led the history-making attack in thousands of predawn landings deep within the enemy's vaunted defenses suffered "extremely small" losses in the air, headquarters announced.

Nazi coastal defenses had been silenced until they offered only sporadic fire and Allied air power completely dominated the battle area. Several of the toughest invasion hurdles had been successfully cleared, but an Allied spokesman warned that "many more remain." Huge Allied reinforcements of men and armor were pouring ashore tonight.

Fixed German guns along the coast were literally blown apart by a 10,000-ton aerial barrage in the eight hours preceding the landings, and then a formidable fleet of American and British warships—including battleships with 16-inch rifles—stood close inshore and destroyed enemy bunkers and gun positions with point-blank fire.

Despite a command by Reichsmarshal Herman Goering that the "invasion must be beaten off even if the Luftwaffe perishes," only 50 German planes appeared in the early hours of the attack. Allied fighters ranged 75 miles inland without meeting opposition.

The German radio reported bitter fighting at a half-dozen points in Normandy and claimed to have identified two U. S. air-borne divisions in the Cherbourg Peninsula and two British air-borne divisions in the Seine area near Le Havre.

First to report that the invasion was under way, the Nazis speculated that the Normandy assault merely was diversionary in nature and declared the invasion troops were "going into an inferno in comparison with which Dante's hell was child's play." The enemy broadcasters said German reinforcements were being rushed to meet the onslaught and that counterattacks already had been struck.

Leading all Allied ground troops in the invasion was Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery, Britain's most famed field commander, who whipped Marshal Irwin Rommel on the sands of Africa.

Why you may not be able to get RALEIGH cigarettes today

IN MOST PARTS of the country Raleigh Cigarettes are still available in normal quantities. But, in case a shortage has already reached your community, we want to explain the reason for it.

35% of our capacity is devoted exclusively to producing cigarettes and tobacco for the armed forces of this country and our allies. But we are able to supply them—and normal civilian demand—by working two shifts on a 48-hour-a-week basis.

There are enough Raleighs for any normal demand, but there are not enough to stand hoarding and panic buying. That's why we ask you to be fair to your fellow Raleigh smokers by ordering Raleighs only as you need them. And that's why we ask wholesalers and retailers to keep only normal stocks.

Overstocking and overbuying not only leave the other fellow high and dry—but they keep you from enjoying Raleighs at their best.

Raleighs are outstanding among cigarettes today because they are still made with generous quantities of fully aged 1940 and 1941 Domestic tobaccos. And these are still blended with rich, aromatic Turkish tobaccos from choice pre-war vintages, now irreplaceable.

The release of sufficient quantities of glycerine, the world's best moisture-control ingredient, enables us to use pre-war quantities for lasting freshness. And this freshness is further protected by our exclusive laminated inner wrap.

But no cigarette—not even a Raleigh—can give you its full goodness if stored overlong.

For these reasons—and to guarantee you perfect pre-war smoking—we are obliged to ration the orders for Raleigh Cigarettes.

While this may make it difficult for you to get Raleighs at times, it will assure you that the Raleighs you do get are always top quality. And we think you'll agree that this assurance more than outweighs the inconvenience.

French Committee Personnel Stirred by Liberation News

The Offices of the French Committee for National Liberation, 1759 R st. nw., presented a dramatic picture yesterday following news of the Allied landing. Excitement reigned as news bulletins reported progress of the attack, and that General de Gaulle had arrived in London.

Many who had swarmed up the gangplanks of Allied boats under the shadow of diving Nazi Stuka bombers at Dunkerque, wept openly at the realization that their long wait to go home might be nearing an end. They wept too for their brothers, fathers, and sons—victims of the Nazis who had shed their blood on the field of battle and in the struggles of the underground since 1940.

Henri Hoppenot, minister of the de Gaullist delegation was aroused from bed at 1 a. m. yesterday to hear the news. He rushed to the legation and read dispatches until 7 a. m., when he returned home, dressed, shaved and appeared back at his office two hours later to talk with newsmen.

Halifax Makes Statement

At the British Embassy, there was a more restrained air. Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, issued a statement expressing confidence in the Allied forces, read the late news bulletins and then went to Baltimore where he was scheduled to address the graduating class of Goucher College. Other members of the Embassy staff kept radios tuned all day to newscasters reporting developments ahead.

The Soviet Ambassador, Andrei Gromyko, heard the news in the early hours of the morning and shortly thereafter issued a statement expressing hope of success for the Allied expedition. Officials expressed satisfaction that at last, Hitler had been caught in a "two-front" war, which they predicted would end ultimately in a "decisive defeat for the Hitlerite clique."

At the Chinese Embassy, there was considerable tension as employes arriving for work gathered in groups to discuss the news. A spokesman voiced the hope of an early end to the war with Germany, to speed victory of China over Japan.

Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia was in New York when the news broke, but kept in contact with the Australian Minister, Sir Owen Dixon.

The Brazilian Ambassador, Mr. Carlos Martins, received reports at his desk throughout the day and was kept busy sending dispatches to his government.

Phil Fellows' Kin Sure He Landed in France

At the home of Philip Wesley Fellows, former American University athlete, three pairs of ears were glued to the radio yesterday. His mother, sister, and brother listened at 1937 38th st. nw., for the latest reports on the French attack because Phil is participating.

Fellows, technician 4th class with Army ordnance, has been in England since January.

His mother, Mrs. Perry A. Fellows; his sister, Elizabeth, and his brother, Frank, learned of the landing in France when they turned on the radio yesterday morning, and there has been little calmness at the Fellows household since, according to Elizabeth, a student at Gordon Junior High.

Monday they had a letter from Phil telling about playing touch football and enjoying the candy sent him from home. His only reference to travel was the cryptic note: "Just send Larry (a brother in the Naval Air Cadets) over to fly me back."

Phil's father is in Addis Abbaba on a Government mission. His wife, Mrs. Helen Margaret Fellows, is living in Philadelphia, Pa., with her parents. They were married in December, 1942, while both were still American University students.

Luther King, 43, Negro, of Gum Springs, Fairfax County, Va., was convicted on charges of illegal operation of a whisky still yesterday in the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia at Alexandria. Sentence is to be passed on Thursday.

He was tried before Judge Robert N. Pollard after the petit jury had been dismissed, subject to recall for the session on Thursday. During the prosecution by Harry H. Holt, jr., assistant United States attorney, inspectors for the alcohol tax unit of the Bureau of Internal Revenue and Alcoholic Beverage Control Board investigators told how they raided a still near Springfield, Va., May 7.

Silver Spring Man Misses D-Day 5 Days to Win $10

Three months ago, J. A. Haine, justice of the peace and clerk to the Silver Spring (Md.) police court, made a "liberation day bet" with a friend, wrote the date down on a slip of paper and locked it in a safe.

The Allied landing in France was within five days of his guess so he added the loser's bet of $10 to his bankroll.

Pilot Killed, 1 Escapes In 2 Crashes

One Army pilot was killed and another escaped injury yesterday in two crashes within an hour in Upper Marlboro, Md. Both planes were Thunderbolt (P-47) fighters from Camp Springs.

The dead man was identified as 2nd Lieut. Charles Hitt of Dallas, Tex.

The crash was witnessed by Ignacius Mayhew into whose field the plane crashed. Mayhew noticed the plane trailing a white plume of smoke at about 500 feet. It circled as though trying to land, he said, and then went into a dive from about 50 or 60 feet. It landed about 100 feet from the spot Mayhew was plowing but the flames were too intense for him to reach the plane.

The pilot of the other plane apparently walked away unharmed after making a crash landing, according to Sergt. Elon Turner of the Prince Georges County police. The identity of the pilot could not be ascertained at the time.

WLB Calls End To Greyhound, Union Contract

The War Labor Board yesterday ruled that the contracts between five Greyhound Bus companies and the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes (AFL) have been effectively terminated on notices from the companies involved.

Both groups were directed, however, to continue the contract terms, with the exception of a disputed arbitration clause, until new ones are drawn up or until the WLB issues a final order in the case.

The union's contention that new contract terms should be submitted to arbitration was rejected by the board, although labor members dissented in the finding.

The five companies involved in the negotiations for new contracts are Pennsylvania Greyhound, Central Greyhound, New England Greyhound, Illinois Greyhound, and the Capitol Theater Bus Terminal, Inc., in New York City.

Eisenhower's Son Applauded as He Gets Army Diploma

West Point, N. Y., June 6 (AP).—Solemn graduation ceremonies at the U. S. Military Academy here today were interrupted by a tremendous burst of applause from D-Day-conscious crowds as Cadet John Eisenhower, son of the liberation chief, received his diploma from Maj. Gen. Francis B. Wilby, Academy superintendent.

Eisenhower, commissioned a second lieutenant in the Infantry, has been assigned to Fort Benning, Ga., for transition training.

Also among the graduates was Cadet Henry Beukema, future son-in-law of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of U. S. invasion ground forces.

Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, speaker at the services, made no direct reference to the liberation. He told cadets of the responsibilities of being graduated at "this momentous time."

18 Men Killed, 12 Hurt In Crash of Navy Bomber

San Diego, Calif., June 6 (AP).—Eighteen Navy men were killed and 12 injured today when a Navy Liberator bomber crashed into structures at the Camp Kearny auxiliary air station on Kearny mesa.

KING NEPTUNE SPEARS 'EM. Thrilliest stars ever to appear in the Neptune Room are the new Millers and Goncalves combo plus the impressive concert piano of Cervantes. This doesn't except Milt Herth and his Herthquakes, who made downtown musical history a couple of seasons back. When Lee and Leslie Miller, who played four years in Rio, and native Brazilian Walter Goncalves turn loose on that chick-a-boom—the Neptune foundations rock and all the waitresses walk like Carmen Miranda . . . Contrasted with this are the lustrous Cervantes piano concertos and native Philippine music.

After their wedding at the Church of the Epiphany, Charles Moffat, chairman of the Canadian Purchasing Commission, his radiant bride and their wedding party went straight across G st. to Olmsted's for lobster, champagne and baked Alaskas.

GOOD NEIGHBORS, of both North and South American persuasions, are bounding out to La Conga's "Good Neighbor Revue" in ever-increasing regiments. It's a show that grows on you, that you'd like to see every night. When Nilda sings "It Hurts, It Hurts"—when Celia does the rumba in that gown that's forever threatening to fall off—those are moments when the customers agree that the world is just a bowl of cherries for the evening . . . The Latin dance rhythm of the Calvet orchestra is perfection, incorporated.

CHIC NEWCOMERS. "Candy" McCaffrey is the new hostess at Treasure Island. She has lovely red hair, eyebrows shaped like cherubs' wings—and she knows all the angles of the nitery business. . . . Irene Arenda, pretty singer from North Carolina, is looking after the ciggie concession at the Hi Hat and saying little prayers every hour on the hour that the 30 per cent tax will be lifted so that she can become the spot's canary.

Frankie Donato and his "All Girl Revue" is setting a new high dizzy mark for Kavakos Grill. Joyce Moyer, dance leader, provides the sugar and Frankie the mustard of the show. For contrast there's "Tanglefoot" Crosby who transcribes boogie into taps.

THE WAVES ROLL HIGH. The "Waves Victory Song," written by Wave Muriel Sullivan, often played by Johnny Shaw's orchestra in the Mayflower Lounge and Al Yurdin's Four at Mayfair, will be heard from coast to coast tomorrow night over Mutual. It will be sung by a group of 50 Waves and played by the Navy Band.

EAR TICKLERS. Durward Bowersox' violining of "I'll Be Seeing You," loveliest song of the year, on the Starlight Roof . . . Bob Brewer's dalliance with "Poinciana" on the King Cole Room piano . . . Sid Willoughby's deeply velvety organing of "Goodnight, Wherever You Are" at Restaurant 400 . . . The glee club version of "The Sunny Side of the Street" that's being wafted by Mary La Marr together with the boys of the band at Crossroads . . . The stirring polka music in the Balalaika's new "Polka Revue"—it's fair fit to make a wooden Indian start skipping . . . Velva Nalley's charming resuscitation of the old, "What Can I Say, Dear, Now That I've Said Goodbye" in the Anchor Room. It's one of her favorites . . . Sharron Terry's softly torchy version of "I'll Get By" with Paul Kain's band at Glen Echo. It sends the youngsters. . . George Berg's boogie piano at the Brown Derby. Watch the Steinway. It actually quivers.

State Department Declares Bolivia Back Allied Cause

The revolutionary regime governing Bolivia is "irrevocably committed" to the cause of the United Nations, the State Department advised other American nations yesterday in a report strongly favorable to diplomatic recognition.

The provisional government headed by Maj. Gualberto Villarroel, the report said, has eliminated its anti-democratic elements and is "in control of the political situation."

But, said the communication to foreign ministers of the other American republics, diplomatic acceptance would further strengthen the position of the regime by helping draw to it the traditional political parties of Bolivia.

Since it took over from President Enrique Penaranda in a coup d'etat December 20, the Villarroel group has been recognized only by Argentina among the American nations.

Tito Forces Take 6 Yugoslav Towns

London (Wednesday), June 7 (AP). In an accelerated offensive to coincide with the Allied landings in France, partisans of Marshal Tito captured six towns from the Germans, the Free Yugoslav radio reported today in a broadcast.

In western Bosnia, the broadcast said, Kljuc and Arzano were taken with more than 300 Germans slain in the fighting for Arzano. In eastern Bosnia, the partisans reported, four towns were taken southeast of Belgrade.

President's Prayer

Last night for what we believe to have been the first time in history a President of the United States led the entire Nation in prayer. A few hours earlier the King of England had called upon his people to maintain "a vigil of prayer." Indeed, in all parts of Britain and its dominions, in the United States, in enslaved Europe, and doubtless also in the far reaches of the Pacific people gathered in small groups for special supplications. All these prayers gave voice to a single desire—the speedy success of our arms in the momentous adventure on the continent of Europe, and the safety of the suppliants' kinsmen and friends who are engaged in it.

Perhaps there are some who think the President's prayer might have been still more moving and eloquent had he protested less about the righteousness of our cause and the inflexibility of our purpose—since it is, after all, God who judges causes and disposes of the purposes of men—or had he been content merely to repeat some ancient and hallowed formulary, such as the Lord's Prayer. But doubtless the President was obliged to speak as a statesman as well as an humble suppliant.

And doubtless, too, there are few of us whose prayers would not be the better for some amendment in the attitude of heart, if not in the form of language, in which they are uttered. For the present, perhaps, as the President suggested, the main thing is to regain the habit of prayer, and one of these days we may discover in ourselves those things which are necessary to all real prayer—humility, contrition, and the sense of dependence upon God, with Whom, it is said, all things are possible, and without Whom nothing is possible.

Polish Visitor

One of the thorniest problems facing the Allies today is the problem of Russo-Polish relations. Thus far it has defied the best efforts of London and Washington to achieve a satisfactory solution. Yet the nearer we get to the postwar period the more urgent it becomes. For this reason the visit to Washington of Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, Polish Prime Minister, is welcome. Certainly it is a reasonable assumption that he would not have been asked to come to the United States for conversations with President Roosevelt and the Department of State if the Russian-Polish problem were altogether hopeless. It is more likely that these conversations are to be held because a modus vivendi between Poland and its great neighbor to the east is now deemed possible. The United States, for its part, is already on record as having proffered its good offices to both governments in the hope of bringing them together. In the interests of United Nations harmony it is imperative that we continue to press for mediation.

After Kesselring

General Alexander is letting no grass grow under his feet. No sooner had the Fifth Army entered Rome than advance units began the pursuit of Marshal Kesselring's fleeing forces. For while Rome was one of the objectives of the Allied offensive, it was by no means the only one, or even the most important. The prime objective was the destruction of the German armies in Italy.

To what extent this objective has been attained is not yet clear. The Germans have undoubtedly suffered heavy casualties. In a speech to his corps commanders, General Clark of the Fifth Army has declared that parts of two German armies, the Tenth and the Fourteenth, have been destroyed. The probability is that the Fourteenth Army is no longer capable of fighting. Furthermore, the German forces that have managed to escape the Allied trap have largely been denuded of their equipment, including much of their transport. There is a chance, therefore, that at least some, and possibly a large number, of the escaping German troops will never get to their destination.

The problem facing Kesselring is difficult. If he attempts to make a stand somewhere north of Rome, say, on a line running between Pisa and Rimini, he may ultimately suffer further and dangerous attrition of his waning forces. To do so at all, in fact, may require the reinforcement and reequipment of his battered armies. And in this respect he is likely to be disappointed by the epochal events occurring elsewhere. With the Allies now holding beachheads in western Europe, and the Russians preparing to strike from the east, Germany can spare neither the men nor the materiel for the hard-pressed Kesselring.

For Kesselring to retreat to the Po Valley, however, would mean bringing the battle line perilously close to the Brenner and beyond. Such a retreat would give the Allies effective control of most of the Adriatic. It would make a liaison between the Allied forces in Italy, in France and in Yugoslavia easier. It would give the Allies possession of such invaluable Italian ports as Leghorn and Spezia and of the supremely important airfield at Ancona. Kesselring, indeed, is on the spot. Let us hope that our gallant men give him no time to readjust himself to his new circumstances.

Death Grapple

A supreme confidence that success will attend the death grapple with Hitler fills this and all other Allied lands. In our hearts and on our lips there is prayer, in our souls a steadfastness of purpose, in our arms a mighty strength, the fruit of the union between front and factory. How can we fail? Yet, no matter how inexorable the victory, how irresistible the tide of liberation which is now flooding over the walls of Hitler's fortress, the speed of the conquest will depend upon the daring of our military leadership. There must be no pause. We must not risk another Passchaendaele. And there will not be another Passchaendaele if our generals see that there is not another Anzio. For it's the Anzios that produce the Passchaendaeles, the lack of iron courage to keep up the push. Pasted in the hats of the commanders of our swarming troops should be Lord Nelson's recipe, "I owe all my success to being a quarter of an hour ahead of my enemy."

It is inevitable that after five years of carnage, we and all other watchers of the unfolding drama in Europe should envisage the end of the road. But the end still has to be fought for. The mightiest convulsion in all history, in other words, has to run its course before the Nazi heel can be raised from the neck of Europe. And in that course the civilian will be tested as well as the soldier. For, aside from the furious fighting, the Nazis will make a desperate effort to split the Allies. Let us at home be on guard against a Nazi campaign destined to snatch victory out of the jaws of defeat.

It would be victory for the Nazis even if our great coalition came out of this war intact but pockmarked with suspicion and incipient dissension. Let us remember that. Let us remember that the blood that the Allies are shedding in common to rid the world of a scourge is dedicated blood. It is being shed not only to destroy but to upbuild. Not only are our warriors offering their lives to uproot an evil with which there can be no compromise, they are taking that ultimate risk so that an ampler life can be assured for all mankind. We owe it to them to see that the greatest fighting coalition in all history is matched by the greatest design to banish fear and to regenerate society. God will answer our prayers for victory only as He sees we deserve it.

Recreation Program

The recommendation of the House Appropriations Committee to dispense with the services of FSA's Recreation Division is likely to prove a most expensive form of economy. The committee's view is that the war recreation program has been substantially completed. So it has, perhaps, in respect to the entertainment of men in uniform. American communities, working under the stimulus and supervision of the Recreation Division and aided in many places by the USO, have made a splendid response to the leisure time needs of servicemen. For the most part, local activities, having now been set in motion, can be carried on without Federal aid. But the no less important task of providing recreational opportunities for warworkers is still very far indeed from fulfillment.

The obligation to afford servicemen some participation in community life has been recognized readily and generously by the American people. They have been a good deal slower, however, in meeting their responsibility to industrial employes who have migrated in vast numbers from their homes to newly established war production centers. Very often communities have resented, rather than welcomed, the influx of warworkers and their families. The presence of these newcomers has raised serious community problems, overtaxing local housing, transportation and recreational facilities. Yet their integration into the community is clearly indispensable to their efficiency as producers.

Major employers are increasingly appreciative of this fact. The manager of Henry J. Kaiser's Vancouver shipyards, for example, is quoted as follows in an article by Agnes E. Meyer: "The way people live and the way their families are cared for is bound to be reflected in production . . . If the single men have no recreation, they get morose. You have to treat workers like human beings, not like machines." Recreation is important also as a preventive of juvenile delinquency. It is something which must be looked upon in the light of experience, not as a frill but as a vital wartime need.

FSA's Recreation Division has gone about the filling of this need in the simplest and most effective fashion possible. It has made no attempt to operate recreation centers from Washington. On the contrary, its procedure from the outset has been to leave this peculiarly local function to local leaders, providing merely technical assistance for organization and management. But this technical assistance is an urgently needed spark. The bulk of the job still remains to be done. The migration of industrial workers is by no means ended. Indeed with cutbacks and changes in military requirements, workers will find it necessary to move in great numbers from places like the Brewster plant at Long Island City to new production centers. Their efficiency will be enhanced if they and their families are afforded adequate recreational opportunities. Only an illusory economy can be effected by denying them this. The Senate, we believe, will promote the war effort by restoring to the Recreation Division the modest sum which it seeks for the continuation of its invaluable work.

Assistant King

Victor Emmanuel III, Italy's decrepit and discredited King, has withdrawn from public affairs. Here, at least, is one concrete symbol of Italian liberation achieved with the Allied capture of Rome. But it is a minor symbol at best—and perhaps a spurious one. For Victor Emmanuel has not abdicated. He has merely, by his own royal decree, transferred authority to his no less discredited son, Umberto, Prince of Piedmont—conferring upon him the ludicrous title, "lieutenant-general of the realm." If the streets of Rome have rung with any shouts of "Long Live Umberto," they have not been audible at this distance.

To Italians, Umberto can mean neither freedom nor regeneration. Throughout the whole of his princely career he has earned only the scorn and contempt of his countrymen. They refer to him widely as "the national cretin." It is his reputation that he spends his nights in sin and his days in confession. He possessed neither the intelligence nor the moral force to resist fascism. Like his father, on the contrary, he relished its fruits while they had flavor and relinquished them only when expediency dictated such a turnabout. It is altogether fatuous to suppose that his fictitious rulership over Italy can be in any sense conducive to that "reform on democratic lines" or that "new atmosphere of freedom" which President Roosevelt bespoke for the Italian people.

For a quarter of a century, said the President, the people of Italy were degraded and enslaved by the rule of Mussolini. Victor Emmanuel and Umberto took part in that rule. What sort of liberation can the Italians expect when they see the scepter pass from the doddering hands of the one to the soiled and shaking hands of the other? They know—and it would be absurd for us to ignore—that we are responsible for the transfer. Our arms have kept the trappings of royalty about their shoulders. For as long as we support the dishonored House of Savoy, we shall dishonor the banner of liberation under which we advance.

On The Beachheads

There is every reason for Americans and their Allies to be gratified by the progress of their armies of liberation on the coast of France. As Winston Churchill told the House of Commons yesterday, "this operation is proceeding in a thoroughly satisfactory manner." The naval losses incident to the landings are described as "very, very small." Our air forces have thus far met with relatively little resistance. And from beachheads now firmly in Allied hands our troops are fanning out into the interior.

Yet the fact must be recognized that while the enemy's initial reaction to the invasion was less fierce than expected, he has not yet hurled against our troops the force he commands. He will certainly employ it. The really dangerous moment for the Allies will come when the Germans launch their inevitable counterattacks. As to that, much will depend on the time it takes the Nazis to mobilize their reserves and the places they select for particular attention. During the initial stage the Allies had the advantage that the Germans were stretched along a great extent of coastline. Moreover, we enjoyed complete supremacy over the landing beaches. These circumstances made it possible for our men to enjoy a considerable measure of tactical surprise. That advantage has not yet been exhausted.

There will be other landings besides those that have already been carried out. But General Eisenhower can be expected to keep the enemy guessing as long as possible as to where these landings will be. Only let us bear this in mind: before real success can be achieved we must meet the main body of the enemy and master it. And that task is still before us. The fact remains, however, that our troops have met their first test with flying colors—a tribute to their fine spirit, their excellent training, and the superb planning that went into the operations now taking place in France.

BOMBERS' MOON

"Over my shoulder, making moon-rays through the clouds, shines the biggest, palest, fullest moon. Out here, we have inspected fox-holes, repaired broken sandbags. All the while, I have thought how wrong it is to spoil a thing of beauty like this, to make it a guide for bombers."

If I remember, now, the words you wrote
And look on a full moon also banked with cloud,
Think how we watched, once, this steeple float,
White in the white light, full-sailed, tall,
and proud,
Almost I shall hate beauty for the pain.
It is not right that loveliness so soon
Flood these far hills. Better, that black rain
Come, and drown fathom-deep your bombers' moon.

Yet we are wrong. Beauty is still the same;
Although, by evil, to this misuse turned.
We have not loved the ashes of a name,
But timeless fire, which from all time has burned.
Steeples in silver sailed—they shall sail night,
And we shall watch, after last bomber's flight.

—EARL DANIELS.

Postwar Unity

By Mark Sullivan

World Organization

THIS INVASION of Europe is supposed, and hoped, to have an ultimate objective—a world organization to prevent repetition, to prevent future wars. This proposal, as the invasion got under way, had a clearly marked status in Washington. About it there has been, increasingly for several weeks, a common attitude, shared by all who will have a part in bringing it about—including President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Hull and those members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who have most to do with the project.

The attitude has been one of caution, of limitation, of keeping the attempt at world organization within the scope of what is surely practicable, and especially what is surely acceptable to the American people. Part of the motive for this attitude has been to avoid division of our people on the project, to keep it from becoming a partisan issue in politics—and hope to so many that the coming presidential campaign shall be carried on without the proposed world organization becoming an issue.

Up to the moment the invasion began, this hope had strong prospects of being fulfilled. The likelihood was that there would be a common denominator in the stand to be taken by the coming Republican National Convention in its platform, the stand of the Democratic National Convention, the attitude of President Roosevelt, and the attitude of the Senate.

WILL THIS LIKELIHOOD be changed by the invasion? Will the attitude of leaders and of the country—toward this and other aspects of the war, and of the political campaign—be changed by the facts of active fighting going on in Europe? In any event it is worth while to set down, as a landmark existing on the day invasion began, the basic points of American intention about world organization.

In the organization, the United States was to sacrifice none of its independence. That word was used by President Roosevelt in a press conference last week. And when questioned later he said that "independence" means the same as the other word frequently used in this connection, "sovereignty." The notion that the world organization should take the form of a super government involving surrender of some of our sovereignty was negatived.

As to the use of armed force, a world police force, there was some lack of agreement. But the prevailing opinion was that the United States should reserve its option. We would decide, in each contingency as it arises, whether our forces should be used.

ON ONE POINT there was an opinion, strongly held in the Senate, which is related to the present development in Europe. It was that the proposed world organization is inseparably connected with whatever is the nature of the peace settlement arrived at upon the end of the present war. From this arises the conviction that nothing about permanent world organization should be done until after the war is over. It would follow that American willingness to enter a world organization, and the nature of the organization, would be dependent on the nature and details of the peace settlement.

Here arises the greatest risk of the proposal for world organization becoming a factor in the presidential campaign. Considerable sections of American thought, and considerable groups of voters, have definite views as to what should be done about certain countries, their boundaries and their national integrity. An example is Poland. Whether Poland is to lose some of her territory to Russia, or suffer other detriment, is closely watched by American voters of Polish descent. To bring about assent of the Polish government in exile to some kind of settlement is undoubtedly the purpose of the arrival in Washington of the Polish Premier to consult with President Roosevelt. As to several other European countries, there are similar attitudes on the part of groups of American voters.

Food For Japan

In an address in San Francisco, a news correspondent who lived years in Japan before Pearl Harbor treachery said: "Americans are the most gullible people in the world. Within one week after the war we are going to have food going out of San Francisco to feed Japan. Japan would have let us starve."

We once had plenty of blundering idealists who shouted, "Do not fortify Guam. It will offend Japan." They outshouted our Army and Navy. We lost the Philippines. We paid for that by billions in taxes—even if we can overlook the cost in American blood.

Why not face facts? A small group of immigration restrictionists fought the hyphenates in Congress for 20 years until we obtained a registration-of-aliens act. Why not another to cancel all dual citizenships? Why give the privileges of American citizenship to a Keibei born here, but sent to Japan to be educated in first loyalty to the Mikado?

They do the education job well at Tokyo. Note the report that, of 1500 Japs at Attu, four surrendered. One thousand four hundred and ninety-six died to show loyalty to their Shinto Emperor, descendant of the Sun Goddess.

Council Of Nations

By Sumner Welles

A Reply To Walter Lippmann

IN HIS COLUMN of May 25 Mr. Walter Lippmann states that the central argument of an address which I delivered in New York City on May 18 is not clear to him.

In that address I explained the reasons for my belief that the immediate creation of a council of the United Nations is necessary so that representatives of all of the peoples of the United Nations may have a voice in political decisions in Europe which until now have been made solely by the three major powers.

For basic decisions of this character will play a large part in determining what kind of a Europe is going to exist after the defeat of Germany, and what kind of a world organization can eventually be established.

I have frequently expressed the opinion that until a perfected world organization is constructed the major powers, because of the armed strength which they possess, must through cooperative measures assume the chief responsibility for checking aggression in the world, and that under such conditions they must be able freely to carry out these obligations. But I have also reiterated my conviction that in all other international decisions the remaining members of the United Nations should, directly or indirectly, have a voice. I am persuaded that peoples who are nationals of the smaller countries will not supinely accept nor long tolerate the assumption of any kind of overlordship by the three major powers in the determination of international policies by which the future destinies of all peoples will be profoundly affected.

MR. LIPPMANN'S REASONS for alleging that my argument is not clear appear to spring only from the facts that under present conditions no government of France could participate in such a council because, according to him, the Government of the United States is adhering to a policy "of not recognizing the existence of any government capable of representing France," that "the present Polish government cannot participate because the Soviet Union does not recognize it," and that "there is not now a Yugoslav government which can participate and no Greek government."

Were we to adopt this line of reasoning, no council of the United Nations should now be set up because for wholly transitory reasons all of the members of the United Nations could not immediately be represented upon it. This is equivalent to saying that because of momentary impediments involving the representation of only the French, Polish and Yugoslav peoples—since, of course, a Greek national government is now in existence and functioning—the peoples of Norway, of the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Greece and of Czechoslovakia, the peoples of all of the American republics who are at war or who are supporting the cause of the United Nations, the peoples of the British dominions, and the peoples of other nations throughout the world who are members of the United Nations, should be deprived of any right to be heard when these decisions are made.

SURELY MR. LIPPMANN must agree that if the basic principle of the right of participation of all of the United Nations is admitted, the political difficulties which would make it impossible for the time being for three of them to be represented do not constitute a valid justification for the exclusion of the great majority of the remainder.

It has frequently happened in the meetings of the Council of the League of Nations or of the governing board of the Pan American Union that chairs at the council table allotted to nations which were members of those organizations have been temporarily vacant because of the same kind of political impediments as those mentioned by Mr. Lippmann. As soon as those political difficulties were solved representatives of the nations in question once more filled their rightful places.

In precisely the same way, as soon as the French people have had the opportunity of freely selecting their government and as soon as solutions for the existing problems affecting the Polish and Yugoslav peoples have been found, representatives of these three nations would take part in the deliberations of the proposed council of the United Nations.

IT IS GRATIFYING to have Mr. Lippmann agree that "certainly it would be better, surely it would be safer . . . if continental Europe were represented in the decisions which affect the future of Europe." But are we to understand from what would appear to be the exclusive phraseology employed by Mr. Lippmann that members of the United Nations which are not countries of "continental Europe" should in his judgment be precluded from having any voice in "decisions which affect the future of Europe?" Are we to understand that he maintains, for example, that great powers of the Western Hemisphere now actively cooperating in the prosecution of the common war effort should be permitted to play no part in rendering these decisions?

It would be difficult to think that Mr. Lippmann holds that such great powers as Brazil and Mexico are not going to be affected by the "future of Europe." It would seem to me to be clear that the future of Europe is something which affects the future of every country.

The real issue, as Mr. Lippmann, of course, must recognize, is whether the United Nations are now going to seize the opportunity to create the nucleus of an international organization in which all peoples and all regions are to be afforded the opportunity of participating, or whether three or four great powers, because of their superior strength, are going to attempt to dictate the destinies of the world.

Fortunately, nothing could have been more deeply heartening in this connection than the indication recently given by our own Government that the solution which it envisages for this grave problem is a wholly democratic solution and one which will satisfy the legitimate interests and aspirations of all of the United Nations, small as well as large.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

United Sovereignties

A great deal has been said and written about the establishment of a postwar international organization to prevent wars. For the most part what has been said and written on the subject is "full of sound and fury, signifying nothing." It is futile to approach this matter with timidity and suspicion; it must be approached with boldness, an open mind, and a clear understanding of its importance.

Any plan for world peace must embrace two fundamental objectives; first, the establishment and maintenance of peace and cooperation among the peoples of the world who have stabilized governments; and, second, the establishment of an effective system of keeping in control those people of the world who have not stabilized governments until they demonstrate their fitness for self-government.

The only rational alternative to the present narrow, incoherent, and indefinite international political and economic structure is a broad, coherent and definite structure that will be effectively conducive to peace, harmony and progress among mankind.

The basic outlines of such a structure can be found in our own Federal Constitution. Practically every necessary element of an effective international organization could be patterned after our Constitution.

In addition we should receive illuminating instruction from the analogy between the situation that existed in this Nation under the Confederation and prior to the adoption of our present Constitution, and the situation existing in the world today. The lesson is obvious, political power, whether national or international, must be definite, coherent and integrated to be effective. Therefore, it behooves us to bend our efforts to securing an international organization modeled as nearly as practicable after our national system of Government.

Sunday On The Hill

It is incredible that, in the midst of a great struggle for ideals peculiarly American, the hill on which the Capitol is located should be virtually a deserted village on Sundays.

The letter of Maury Maverick, and your editorial, constitute a brave effort to correct this condition. Let me add a few specific suggestions.

The originals of the Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence be on exhibition on Sunday in the Library of Congress. The suggestion of The Post for an honor guard, rotating between the services, is excellent.

Fling the doors of the Capitol of the United States wide open. Guides may conduct parties through. The chambers of the Senate and House and the old Supreme Court room should be shown, even though empty. Americans like to see the physical places where their laws are made.

To make this arrangement possible, close the Capitol on Saturday. The Senate and House are rarely in session on Saturday anyway. Nor are they in session on Sunday. But Sunday, the Capitol should be available to those men and women in the armed services who want to see the symbols of the liberty for which they are pledged to fight and die.

Let the Capitol be a brilliant sight at night. Resume the colored flood-lighting of the fountains, now cut off to save expense. Imagine this saving of a few dollars when we are spending billions for saving what this hill symbolizes!

As Mr. Maverick and The Post suggest, give the citizens the benefit of bands playing from 11 o'clock in the morning on. For the symbols of our national life are something to remember and rejoice over to the thrilling strains of music.

Give us back our Capitol now, not long after the terror of this night of war is over.

Humanized Government

By Malvina Lindsay

Hope For Robots

THE TREADMILL of Government service need not be accepted with resignation either as a necessary evil of bureaucracy or as an act of God. Something can be done about it—in spite of the vise of tradition, the spoils system, and national concern with the fleshpots of life.

Thus, in true energetic American fashion, those concerned with the problem have written this column apropos of the recent discussion in this space of the civil service robot and the danger he offers to democracy. Only a few correspondents—who confess they are robots themselves—feel the situation is hopeless. Through their letters runs the plaint of futility. "If only I could feel that my work meant something!" In spite of effort they do not advance; the "chit of a girl" not even graduated from high school, yet favored by a Senator, gets the high rating, the advance in salary.

But others come more constructively to grips with the problem. They offer suggestions which range from improvement of methods to regeneration of human beings. The root of the difficulty, writes an author on political subjects, is that "government officials from the top down proceed on the assumption that their own work and standing are enhanced by increasing rather than decreasing the number of employes under them to do the required work. In other words, even in Congress, whether the task is to be authorized by legislation or carried out by departments, the question is rarely asked and never answered: Is this necessary?"

Supervisor's Suggestions

A young man, who has been seven years in Government service, the last three as a supervisor, and whose ambition is to make Government administration a career, offers an interesting contribution to the problem. He submits a list of principles that he feels should underlie any effort to save public servants from regimentation. Briefly summarized, these are:

Orient each employe in his job, those promoted as well as recruits. Show him how his job fits into the flow of work.

Train each supervisor in the principles of good job relations. A course in this is now being given in many Government offices.

Delegate to supervisors the necessary authority to perform their offices. Their decisions should not be repeatedly overruled by higher-ups.

Publicize all vacancies within an office so all employes in the organization may know of them. Seniority, after a minimum service period, should be secondary to job qualifications.

Erase from the minds of supervisors and work planners the idea that efficiency can be attained only by minute division of labor and mechanization of operations.

Train supervisors to rate the efficiency of employes objectively. They should sit down with employes, discuss their work and ratings; should commend good work, should talk to employes to remedy poor service.

Afford opportunity through suggestion systems with appropriate rewards for improvement in operating procedure.

Teach Government supervisors they are measured at the rate at which their units accomplish work—not how much they do of it themselves.

Supervisors should maintain an open door to all employes.

Pleasant working conditions should be provided for all employes.

In these excellent suggestions, and in others sent in, one idea seems to be dominant—the need for better supervisors, administrators, directors—the need for Government officials with intelligence, character, imagination, the qualities of leadership.

Call For Patriots

How can this need be filled? Only by inducing more young Americans with ability to go into public service. Only by awakening American youth to its responsibility to serve the state.

In the more than half a century that the dollar has been the symbol of success in this country too many gifted men and women have turned contemptuously from service of city, State or Nation to careers in the less trammeled and more lucrative business world. As a result, too many people with timid, regimented minds have come into key positions in public service—thus strengthening the worst features of bureaucracy.

However, during the last decade, there has been evidence of a shift from that attitude. The development of the National Institute of Public Affairs, with its program internship in Government, is one manifestation of this. Young college men and women generally have been showing a greater interest in public careers. The attitude of noblesse oblige, which has so long led the British upper classes into public service, has been showing some signs of growth here.

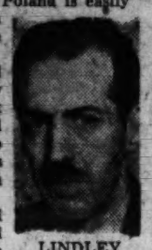
Now is the psychological moment to strengthen that attitude. Now that there is a surge of patriotism and nationalism, the need for service in peace as well as in war should be driven home to American youth. Now is the time to arouse the future citizens of this Nation, by education and crusade, to the fact that if this democracy, now being preserved by blood and sweat, is to continue to exist and fulfill its destiny, it must be run by free minded citizens who are as willing to give their all to the grind and routine of an office as to the dangers of a battlefield.

Future Of Poland

By Ernest Lindley

American Approach To Problem

THE WAY IN WHICH the United States Government has been approaching the question of the future of Poland is easily understood when two points are kept in mind:



LINDLEY

1. The United States probably could not, if it wished, compel the Russians to accept its views on the Polish problem.

2. Poland alone is not and cannot be a threat to the security of the Soviet Union.

The only direct pressure that the United States could bring on Russia now is the suspension of lend-lease shipments. That would imply that the United States did not wish to see Germany defeated. It would be a signal to the Russians to make a separate peace first, it would precipitate a struggle between Russia and the western powers for strategic frontiers and alliances in Europe.

SOME OF THE Polish extremists have envisioned some such course. They have already begun to talk of the "next war" between Russia and the Western powers, or between Russia and a revived Germany or European coalition. The Russians have heard of this talk among the Polish extremists in exile—in London, among Polish officers in the Mediterranean, and among some of their supporters in the United States. Naturally it does not encourage the Russians to deal generously with the Poles. Certainly they intend to prevent these elements from getting control of a reconstructed Poland or from having a voice in determining its foreign policy.

President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have consistently held that the Polish problem could not be settled in a reasonably satisfactory way unless the Russians felt secure. This means, first, the defeat and demilitarization of Germany. It means, also, of course, that Germany must be kept disarmed. It means that the western Allies must not encourage an eastern or central European coalition hostile to Russia. It means that a system of collective security should be established.

In line with this thinking, President Roosevelt objected two years ago to the inclusion in the Anglo-Soviet treaty of alliance of any guarantees of the Russian boundaries of 1940. The Russians had historical claims to the territories which they absorbed after the German invasion of Poland. But it was felt here that their practical interest in these boundaries was largely strategic; that if Germany were defeated and disarmed and some form of collective security established, the Russians would not feel a strong urge to extend, or even to hold, their boundaries in the west. The President's views prevailed.

AFTER THAT at Casablanca, Messrs. Roosevelt and Churchill announced that they would insist upon the "unconditional surrender" of Germany. Subsequently the Russians indorsed this formula. At Moscow they were offered and accepted promptly a collective security system based upon collaboration among the "Big Four" but providing for a world-wide agency recognizing the sovereign quality of nations. At Teheran plans for the defeat of Germany were coordinated, and a since then the Allies have reached substantial agreement upon the terms of the armistice and of the military occupation of the Reich.

The Russians cannot be sure, any more than we can be, that the Allies will stick together after the war and that a new collective security system will stand up any better than the League of Nations did. They cannot foresee the policy of future governments in the United States or Britain any more clearly than we can foresee what turns Russian policy may take. Obviously they intend to see that the government of a reconstructed Poland looks first to Moscow for security—just as the Czechs have pledged themselves to do. But they behave, certainly, as if they wanted long-term collaboration with Britain, China, and the United States. Certainly they do not want Germany to be permitted to revive as a military power. And clearly they need a period of peace for their own internal reconstruction and development.

If the Russians want peace, a few thousand square miles of marshes will be considerably less important to them than the firm collaboration of the west in keeping Germany disarmed.

Thus the Roosevelt Administration has approached the Polish question via collective security, believing it to be the only route which holds any real promise for Poland. This is the opposite of the route taken by the Polish extremists.

Sen. Gillette Wins, Gilchrist Loses In Iowa Primary

Iowa Democrats gave Senator Guy Gillette a thumping endorsement in his bid for renomination Monday. He won by more than a four-to-one margin over Ernest J. Seemann and will run against Governor Bourke B. Hickenlooper, unopposed for the GOP Senate nomination.

Lieut. Gov. Robert D. Blue won the Iowa Republican gubernatorial nomination over Henry W. Burma and Milton Strickland. He will oppose Richard F. Mitchell, unopposed in the primary.

Representative Fred C. Gilchrist, one of eight Republican congressmen seeking renomination, lost to James I. Dolliver, former State American Legion commander, but Representative Henry O. Talle who was behind twice in early returns finally beat Municipal Court Judge W. A. McCullough. Four of the eight were unopposed.

Invasion Dwarfs Party Politics

YOU COULDN'T ACTUALLY HEAR the roar of the guns from the invasion coast on Capitol Hill, but sometimes you had the feeling that that far-off sound must have explained why all the voices seemed so small.

CHILDS

There were fine sentiments expressed. Speaker after speaker in the House called for an end of partisan politics. They talked of a new unity and a new faith.

The men who regularly cover Congress, looking down on the spectacle from the press galleries, may be a little on the cynical side. Cynicism is in the nature of an occupational disease for them. But I'm inclined to accept the judgment of these knowing veterans.

"They look kind of solemn down there today, don't they?" said one reporter in the midst of the harmony speeches.

"Yeah, that'll last until tomorrow," said another.

"You mean it'll last until they bring up that Kimmel-Short court-martial business in about half an hour."

This proved approximately right. The adjournment of politics will be at best a brief one. For the next two or three weeks most people won't be paying very much attention. They'll be listening to the radio and grabbing the latest editions of the papers and news from across the water will have A-1 priority.

ONE THING that D-Day did was to throw into sudden, sharp relief the particular kind of partisan politics that has been afoot here. As though seen in the harsh light of landing flares, the figures of those who would cripple our home front war controls were abruptly revealed. They had a stealthy, skulking look.

I refer specifically to the efforts to undermine the Price Control Act. Representative Howard Smith of Virginia is conducting a legalistic raid in the House which, if it is successful, could leave OPA administrators more or less helpless to fight down rising prices. On the surface, the Smith attack looks so innocent that it is difficult to combat.

Destruction of necessary controls over our wartime economy here at home could wipe out everything our men are fighting and dying for on the beaches of France. It could open the way for a native fascism as deadly as the imported product.

There was another exercise in legalism on Capitol Hill that seemed incongruous on D-Day. Sewell Avery of Montgomery-Ward & Co. appeared before the House Committee Investigating the Government's action in that case.

From a sheet of paper that trembled in his hands like a leaf in a high wind he read a preliminary statement to the committee before he permitted his lawyers to take over. What he read was a letter written 20 years ago that said the American Revolution had guaranteed this Nation against the closed shop. He read it in a firm voice after the photographers had taken a great many pictures, ending by posing him with a clenched fist, shaken in the simulation of anger.

HOW COMPLETE will be the change in our mental climate now that the great test is on no one can yet say. It is bound—for a time at least—to dwarf all normal events. So much, so much more than anyone can conceive, turns on the outcome of the battle that has been finally joined.

It is about this very problem that some Republicans have been debating in recent days. There were voices, and influential voices, arguing that the Republican convention, which is only 19 days away, should be postponed.

An urgent plea for postponement came especially from those named to make set speeches at the convention. How, they argued, can we talk about the OPA, the budget, waste and inefficiency if three-fourths of the Nation is sitting beside the radio waiting to hear every scrap of invasion news?

Perhaps within two weeks the tension will have somewhat subsided. Perhaps then the Republicans will be able to make themselves heard. That will be determined by events in Europe.

But if only the prosecution of the war, and nothing else, could be for a little time the touchstone. That is the unity which Americans must hope and pray for.

The Gallup Poll

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., June 6.—Although President Roosevelt carried Pennsylvania in 1940, the Keystone States looms as one of the real battle grounds in the coming presidential elections, should Roosevelt and Dewey, most popular candidates today, be the nominees.

Pennsylvania has the second largest number of electoral votes, totaling 35. New York State, with 47, has the largest number.

An intensive, State-wide survey just completed in Pennsylvania by the Gallup Poll shows the President holding a slight edge in popular strength over Governor Dewey when field reporters asked a cross-section of civilian voters to name which of these two possible candidates they would choose if the election were being held today.

The results in Pennsylvania are as follows:

Roosevelt	52%
Dewey	48

By way of contrast, a similar survey in New York State published two weeks ago showed Dewey in the lead, with 52 per cent of the vote to Roosevelt's 48 per cent.

When Roosevelt's strength in the present poll is compared to the figures in the presidential elections in 1936 and 1940 in Pennsylvania, it becomes obvious that Republicans have ground for optimism at the strength shown by Dewey at this early date.

Percentage of Roosevelt Vote in Pennsylvania

TODAY	52

Roosevelt shows relatively substantial support in the two most populous areas in Pennsylvania—Philadelphia and Allegheny County (Pittsburgh area), both industrial strongholds.

Roosevelt's decline in popularity throughout Pennsylvania, as shown in the present survey, has come about mainly through defection of voters in the small cities and small towns of the State, rather than in the two great populous urban centers.

This is shown by comparing his vote in the present survey with the election figures for 1936 and 1940 in these areas and throughout the rest of the State:

	Phila. and Alleg. County	Rest of Pa.
1940	59	50

Move Made to Lift Oleo Tax Curb

A third attempt this session was under way in Congress yesterday to lift tax restrictions on the sale of colored oleomargarine and to permit manufacturers to leave "oleo" off their labelling of the food.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, introduced the bill for which hearings are now being held. Similar legislation was voted down earlier this year by the House Agriculture Committee, and later the Senate rejected an effort to attach much the same provisions onto a tax bill.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette, jr. (Prog., Wisc.) is leading opposition to the Smith move.

The bill seeks to remove the 10 cents a pound excise tax on colored margarine and substitute for it a ¼ cent per pound tax on all margarine manufactured. This would have the effect of giving the housewife margarine already colored. Also, other taxes against the food would be lifted.

Cotton Price Policy of OPA Condemned by Sen. Bankhead

Senator John H. Bankhead 2d (D., Ala.) yesterday charged the Office of Price Administration with fostering textile prices that have run low-price goods off the market and made a near-national scandal of the country's "clothing situation."

In a statement preliminary to consideration by the Senate today of his amendment to the Price Control Act tying price ceilings on textiles to the parity price of cotton, the Alabama Senator declared ceilings are so arranged the cotton farmer gets too little for cotton going into print cloth, drills, denim, chambrays, towels, ginghams, bedspreads, blankets, coverts, and corduroys.

His argument was that OPA, by lifting price ceilings, could increase production of these cloths, and at the same time boost the consumption of raw cotton—which he declared is "dropping at an alarming rate."

At the same time raw cotton has been "squeezed," the price of clothing has advanced rapidly, he said, admitting it would cost 50 million dollars to raise cotton prices to parity. OPA, under its present law, cannot legally place a price so it returns less than parity on a farm product, he declared, but has "knowingly done so."

Bankhead said the OPA is responsible for prices typified by the house dress that now sells for $1.98 but in prewar days sold for 59 cents. To this house dress, he declared, only 10 cents worth of styling has been added—and the cotton grower has received none of the increase.

The Senate, by a vote of 48 to 26, yesterday adopted an amendment offered by Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) which would change court procedure for the handling of OPA cases, making some OPA violations civil rather than criminal misdemeanors.

Cabaret Tax Cut To 20 Pct. by Senate

The Senate yesterday approved compromise legislation raising the public debt limit from 210 billion dollars to 260 billion dollars and cutting the cabaret tax from 30 to 20 per cent.

The House still must approve the conference committee version before the bill goes to President Roosevelt.

The heart-stopping story of the men who work and fight the key weapons of our ocean warfare

DAYBREAK FOR YOUR CARRIER
By Lieutenant Max Miller, U.S.N.R.
Author of I COVER THE WATERFRONT
Introduction by Rear Admiral Arthur C. Davis, U.S.N.
"This book tells how a carrier lives in terms of the human beings who live on it... the men who are launching thousand-plane attacks on the Japanese islands and winning our slow, hard victory in the Pacific. It is a good book and a human book."—Rear Admiral A. W. Radford, U.S.N., Assistant Deputy Chief Naval Operations (Air).
"The men are here to the life with their speech, and their silences, their behavior and their beliefs... The effect is to make both the action and the life of the men, the husbands, brothers, sons of countless readers, seem unusually real and vivid."—Raymond Holden, Book-of-the-Month Club News. $2.50

'Peace' Securities Surge Forward

New York, June 6 (AP).—The big landing news today found financial markets well prepared and stocks, particularly motors and other industrials with good peace prospects, pushed upward in the fastest session since last November.

Shares were subjected to moderate selling at the start but bidders soon took control and, with automotive favorites turning over in blocks of 1000 to 5000, gains at the best ranged from fractions to better than a point, with peaks for the year or longer numerous. A little profit cashing trimmed quotations in most cases at the close. Scattered rails, aircrafts and liquors ended on the offside.

Silent Tribute Paid

The New York Stock Exchange, Curb and other markets throughout the Nation observed moments of silence in tribute to the fighting forces.

Belief that the all-out thrust at Axis Europe meant victory might come quicker than expected served to revive specialized investment demand. Carrier bonds were hesitant but industrial and foreign dollar loans exhibited strength. Grains enjoyed a bulge after an early stumble.

The Associated Press 60-stock average was up 0.2 of a point at 53.1, with the rail composite down 0.1 of a point. Transfers totalled 1,788,760 shares, largest since November 8, 1943, and compared with 858,990 Monday.

At highs for 1944 were General Motors, Chrysler, Packard, Studebaker, Nash-Kelvinator, International Telephone and duPont. Finishing in front were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Union Pacific, Pepsi-Cola, Radio Corp., Dow Chemical, American Can, American Telephone, Goodyear, Goodrich, International Harvester, Eastern Air Lines, American Airlines and Pan-American Airways.

Liquor Shares Drop

Park & Tilford dropped 8½ points. Off a point or so were Schenley, Douglas Aircraft and Great Northern.

At Chicago wheat was up 1¼ to 2 cents a bushel, oats ⅝ to 1¼ and rye 2 to 2½. Cotton, down $1.15 in the forenoon, emerged with advances of 15 to 25 cents a bale.

O'Neill Slated As Next Head Of Va. Bankers

Charles T. O'Neill, vice president of the National Bank & Trust Co., Charlottesville, is expected to be elected president of the Virginia Bankers Association at the fifty-first annual meeting of the association, to be held tomorrow and Friday in Roanoke.

Following the address of the president, Wilfred A. Roper, of Richmond, at the opening session Thursday morning, an amortization discount conference will be held, presided over by Edwin Hyde, of the Peoples Bank, Charlottesville, after which the bankers' conference will be addressed by Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr.

Speakers listed for the afternoon session are Fred A. Carroll, vice president of the National Shawmut Bank, who will have for his subject, "New Business and Investment Policies," and J. Randolph Tucker, association attorney, who will discuss Virginia banking laws of 1944.

At the annual dinner Thursday night the guest speaker will be Edmund H. Harding of Washington, N. C.

Western Beats Eastern for Interhigh Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Well, it was too good to last, the conduct of the District of Columbia Boxing Commission, we mean. After several months of rational behavior, the commission went native again the other day and thought up another unbrilliant idea—that a Henry Armstrong-Nick Latsios fight at Griffith Stadium wouldn't be nice.

POVICH

They ruled it out, in a ringside conclave at the stadium on Monday night, when Promoter Goldie Ahearn exhibited signed contracts of both fighters and asked for license to stage a Latsios-Armstrong match on June 21. "Un-huh," said the commission, "we don't like it. Latsios doesn't have enough experience."

How the boxing commissioners arrived at that conclusion must be fascinating. Especially after they approved the Armstrong-Aaron Perry match of last month as perfectly proper. Perry took less experience into the ring against Armstrong than Latsios boasts, yet that match was okayed.

The commission pointed out that Perry lasted only seven rounds with Armstrong and "there was considerable criticism that he was overmatched." That he was overmatched was true enough, but so is every fighter who gets knocked out. It could be said that Billy Conn was overmatched against Joe Louis.

The customers liked the Perry-Armstrong fight. As long as it lasted it was exciting. So will be a Latsios-Armstrong match. The commission didn't like the $10 tops the promoters charged for Perry vs. Armstrong. But they weren't peddling those $10 tickets with a club. Only those who wanted to pay ten bucks for a ringside seat bought 'em.

Now the commission suggests that Latsios fight Perry before he meets Armstrong. That doesn't explain its refusal to approve Latsios vs. Armstrong. Latsios is a corporal in the Army, stationed at Bolling Field. His commanding officer, Capt. Dick Plasman, is hopping mad at the slight to Latsios. "He's going across pretty soon. It's all right for Latsios to shoulder a gun and go to war, but they say he's not tough enough to fight Armstrong," says Plasman. "That's ridiculous."

If the commission could permit Perry to go in there with Armstrong, then it should leap at the idea of Latsios fighting Armstrong. Perry had fewer than 20 fights before the Armstrong bout and had been out of the amateurs less than a year, yet the commission said that match was all right.

Latsios has been fighting as a professional for more than 2½ years, and before that he was six years in the amateurs. Perry is 17 years old, Latsios, 23. Latsios has had 20 fights as a pro and lost only two. He licked the two men who beat him when he got return bouts with them. Yet he is being kept out of an Armstrong fight because of what the same commission who okayed the Perry fight calls "Latsios" inexperience

Maxie Starr stayed the limit with Perry, yet Latsios knocked him out in seven rounds. Taffy Cummings, in two fights with Perry, went eight and six rounds. Latsios stopped him in three. Joe Torres, who went six rounds with Beau Jack, was badly beaten by Latsios.

Latsios is a big, strong, tough chap, and at 147 pounds he would outweigh Armstrong. Much has been said of Perry's punching, but Latsios is a harder puncher. Bee Bee Wright came to Turner's Arena last winter with six straight victories. Latsios knocked him out in round one with a short right hand to the chin.

This, then, is the guy the commission says wouldn't stand a show with Armstrong. Maybe he wouldn't, but he deserves some kind of a shot at it. The public likes to judge for itself, anyway. That the Armstrong-Latsios fight would draw well is certain.

If the commission is seeking to protect the public from a bad match, it seems to be a new function of the commission, which raised no objections to the Armstrong-Perry and Armstrong-Hanbury matches, and the Armstrong-Frankie Wills bout. The customers liked the first two, which ended in knockouts for the local boy, and didn't like the Armstrong-Wills affair, which went a dull 10 rounds.

Armstrong isn't invincible. He was beaten last week at Chicago by a chap named Willie Joyce, who, it seemed, had beaten Armstrong once before. Latsios is simply tougher than Wills, bigger than Hanbury and a better puncher, can hit as hard as Perry, and has more experience. By every standard he qualifies as a better match for a chap named Willie Joyce, who, it seemed, had beaten Armstrong yet the commission rules him out. Holy smoke.

Gould Hurls 6-5 Victory, Gives 5 Hits

By Newton Bowers

Western's potent Red Raiders came from behind yesterday to nose out a fighting Eastern team, 6 to 5, for the 1944 interhigh baseball championship before 2000 fans at Western.

Pitcher Gene Gould went the route for the Raiders and hurled one of his better games of the season. Coach Woodie Smitherman of Eastern used three pitchers, Paul Shaffer, who started; Gene Collins, who relieved Shaffer in the third, and Phil Cocimano. Gould was touched for five hits.

Eastern's ragged fielding enabled the Raiders to score their first three runs. Jack Castro opened the first inning with a blooper which was bobbled in center field. Fred Wacker flied to left. Jimmy Bissett drew a pass and Leonard Reed singled Castro home. Nick Chanake banged out a double to score Bissett and Reed and end the scoring.

Jack Castro Clouts Homer

Jack Castro hit a mighty home run in the second frame for the Raiders' fourth run. With two out, Castro poled one over the right-field fence. Castro proved himself worthy of a Western uniform all through the game making a pair of spectacular catches and leading his team in batting.

Eastern pushed a pair of runs across in the sixth on a double, two consecutive singles and a fielder's choice. Harry Hughes led off with a double and scored on Pitcher Collins' single. Sonny Settle flied out to center and Walter Kirk hit to the shortstop who threw home in an attempt to cut Collins off but failed.

Eastern forged ahead in the eighth on two homers and a double. Gene Collins led off with a double to right. Walter Kirk belted a home run to center to tie the score at 4-4. Bob Allen then put the Easterners ahead with a homer to right. More runs were ceased when Gould bore down and fanned Bob Lamon to end the inning.

Ramblers Tie Score In Eighth

Western evened matters and went ahead in its half of the eighth on three hits and an error. Little Bill Cavanaugh started the mild rally with a single and went to third on Pitcher Gould's hit. Fred Wacker then hit what appeared to be an easy fly, but the centerfielder bobbled it and Cavanaugh came in with the tying run. Leonard Reed then came through with a single over second to score Gould and put the Raiders ahead, 6-5.

It is Western's first baseball championship in three years. And by coincidence, Coach Cliff Moore piloted the Red Raiders in 1941 and won the championship against the same team, Eastern. Moore then took up Western track duties and came back this year as baseball coach.

DUGOUT SESSION . . . Said Coach Woodie Smitherman of the Ramblers: "It was a well-played game. We met a good club and lost. I think when Western scored those three runs in the first inning, that beat us." Said Coach Cliff Moore of the Raiders: "One of the best games of the season. It was, in my opinion, a typical high school game with natural errors and such." J. Dallas Shirley: "One of the best games I've ever seen" . . . Jack Castro was the star of the game with his spectacular catches and hard hitting. . . . Brian Bell made the last putout of the interhigh season and his last for Western. He graduates this June, leaving behind a great record . . . Other players who will graduate are: George Conway, who has been holding down the Western third sack all season; Fred Wacker and Jimmy Bissett, a pair of exceptionaly good fielders . . . The largest crowd of the scholastic baseball season saw the game.

Castro's Homer Contributes to Raiders' Victory

Jack Castro, Western outfielder, crosses home plate after belting a home run in the second inning of the Western-Eastern Interhigh championship game yesterday at Western. The blow came with none on base and upped the score to 4-0 in the Raiders' favor. Western won, 6-5. Teammates Bill Cavanaugh, Leonard Reed and Joe Carter (right to left) greet Castro as Eastern Catcher Bob Lamon rests on the play.

Carnett Leads Rookie Talent In Majors

New York, June 6 (AP).—Eddie Carnett, the original smiling Irishman from Tulsa, today led the 13 survivors of baseball's draft along the glory road to major league stardom with his fancy play and timely hitting as part-time Chicago White Sox first baseman.

Organized baseball annually selects the top minor league talent for promotion to the big show on a "pick your man . . . last shall be first" basis. Carnett was one of 16 drafted in Chicago last November.

When Hal Trosky was sidelined two weeks ago, Manager Jimmy Dykes pulled Carnett in from the outfield to play first base. He sports a .373 average and has banged out nine hits in the last four games to spark the Sox to their six-game win streak.

Made Outfielder

Bill Skiff made the 28-year-old Carnett over from a pitcher to an outfielder at Seattle last year.

Carnett is the star of the 1944 crop but 12 others still are drawing big league salaries. Outfielder Chet Wieczorek, picked by the Braves from Columbus, is in the Army and Catcher Henry Helf, selected from Milwaukee by the Browns, joined the Navy. Pitcher Al Epperly of San Francisco did not report to the White Sox.

Eddie Mayo was brought back from Louisville and is alternating between short and second for Detroit, hitting .277. Detroit also picked Joe Orengo from St. Paul and he now is playing shortstop after reporting late. Pitcher Clem Hausmann of Kansas City, has won three and lost only one to prove a good $7,500 investment for Joe Cronin's Red Sox.

Weintraub Rates Best

Of the 10 selected by National League teams Phil Weintraub, the veteran first sacker of the Giants, probably rates the top spot for his .316 average. He was drafted from Toledo. The Giants also have George Hausmann, an infielder from New Orleans, who is the regular second baseman although hitting only .170. Southpaw Ewald Pyle, acquired from Minneapolis, has won four and lost four for Mel Ott and Infielder Hugh Luby of Oakland, has been in and out of the infield.

Boston drew a helping pair in Pitcher Ira Hutchinson of Rochester who has a 4-2 won record and Max Macon, a converted pitcher who has made a job for himself at first base by hitting .272. He was taken from the Montreal Club.

Brooklyn's Gil English has played all around the Dodger infield since being drafted from Indianapolis and the Phils appear to have a real find in Pitcher Charley Schanz, a bespectacled righthander from San Diego, who has a 4-4 record. They also have Charley Letchas of Toronto who played second base in both games Sunday.

Delaware's D-Day Program Was for the Best, Says Field

Delaware Park, Stanton, Del., June 6 (AP).—Acting on the assumption that by operating on D-Day more aid would be supplied the war effort than by remaining idle, the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association decided to conduct the sport at Delaware Park. Early Tuesday, Bryan Field, general manager of the track, issued the following statement:

"Delaware Park on this grave day announces its war bond distribution to horsemen, and purses will be increased 50 per cent—all in war bonds. It was decided that closing our race track on D-Day wouldn't help, but that carrying on would help. We are working and carrying on."

An hour or so before the first race the jockeys scheduled to ride on the program were in colors but upon receipt of word from the Jockeys Community Fund and Guild headquarters in New York that riders elsewhere were not plying their trade, they asked for a conference with General Manager Field.

A committee headed by Jockey Nick Wall waited on Field and later the general manager spoke to all riders in the jockey room. Torn between their loyalty to the guild and their obvious opportunity to contribute materially to the war effort, the jockeys were in long consultation before deciding to accept mounts.

Sir Counsellor, making his first start in two years, gave evidence of the skill of his trainer, John Paul Jones, when he made every post a winning one to coast home two easy lengths in advance of his nearest rival, Mrs. W. T. Westrope's Free Double, at the end of the 6 furlongs third race. Boston Blue was an unfortunate third. The winner raced in 1:12 1-5 and paid $8.30.

Attuhe attempted to reach the pace-setting winner and tired from her efforts early as Sir Counsellor loped along in front. Free Double took up the vain task of overtaking the leader while Boston Blue, in close quarters, had no chance to run until clear in the stretch. He then finished fast, but the superiority of the winner was evident.

D-Day Quiets Sports World On All Fronts

By Harold Claassen

New York, June 6 (AP).—Sport's tribute to D-Day was the solemnity of almost absolute quiet today in its stadiums and fields.

Only Delaware State Park and Bay Meadows of the larger racing plants operated while the Pacific Coast League was the only baseball circuit among the majors and top minors to do full-scale business.

Fights, including the 10-round affair between Sammy Angott and Ike Williams at Philadelphia, also were set back.

The racing industry, which announced plans to close on D-Day two weeks ago when President Roosevelt suggested that citizens go to their homes and churches on Invasion Day, quickly fell into line.

New York, Chicago, Boston and Detroit turf plants canceled their programs early followed by Pascoag Park in New England, Charles Town in West Virginia, Ascot Park and River Downs in Ohio, Canada's

Nats to Give Joe Vosmik A Trial Here

Joe Vosmik, veteran 34-year-old outfielder who has been at odds with the Minneapolis club over salary terms, will join the Nats for a try out, President Clark Griffith announced yesterday.

With the permission of the Minneapolis club Vosmik will sign a Washington contract if the Nats' bosses are convinced of his physical condition.

"We have agreed on a sale price and our salary terms have been accepted by Vosmik," said Griffith. "However, the deal will not be completed if his try out does not satisfy the Washington team."

Vosmik Came Up In '30

Vosmik, who came into the big leagues in 1930 with Cleveland, his home town, was one of the leading right-handed hitters of the league for 10 years and in 1933 lost the batting championship to Buddy Myer of the Nats by only 1 point.

He was traded to the St. Louis Browns in 1937 and a year later went to the Red Sox in the deal that sent Buck Newsom back to the Browns. He was with the Red Sox for four years but was released to the minors three years ago.

Vosmik refused to report to the Minneapolis club this season, taking a job with a defense plant in Cleveland. Meanwhile he has been working out in the Cleveland park to keep himself in playing condition.

Awaits Word from Clift

The Nats' interest in Vosmik stems from their unhappy outfield situation which finds George Case suffering from two bruised knees and all of the outfielders in a batting slump.

Vosmik is expected to report to Griffith Stadium on Saturday and await the return of the Nats from Philadelphia on Monday.

Griffith also announced that he expects a reply from Harland Clift "within two or three days." Infielder Clift, who retired from baseball last spring, is now debating a return to the club.

Johnny Allen Signs Giants' Contract

New York, June 6 (AP).—Johnny Allen, relief pitcher who appeared in 32 contests with the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants last year, signed a contract with the Giants today for the remainder of the season. He had rejected previous offers.

Mrs. H. L. Price's Net 70 Captures Diffenbaugh Cup

Mrs. H. L. Price, Kenwood Country Club, fired an 82 and, with the aid of a 12-stroke handicap, finished with a net of 70 to capture the George Diffenbaugh Trophy yesterday at the Kenwood Country Club.

Mrs. Price, who won the Keefer Coup tournament a few weeks ago, went out in 44 and returned in 38 to nose out Mrs. Edward Widmayer, an early finisher who appeared a sure winner with her 71. Mrs. Widmayer had posted an 86, which with her 15 handicap, gave her the second low prize.

Mrs. Betty P. Meckley was awarded the low gross honors. Mrs. Price won this honor, but since a player is allowed to accept only one prize, the award went to Mrs. Meckley.

Class B honors of the day went to Mrs. E. C. Atwood with her 96, 23—73. Low gross went to Mrs. C. A. Joestes with a 48, 49—97.

Army Temporarily Rejects Bosox Trio

Boston, June 6 (AP).—Second Baseman Bobby Doerr, Catcher Roy Partee and Centerfielder Leon Culberson were rejected temporarily for military service today at the Boston Induction Center but were informed they would be recalled for reexamination at a future date.

No reasons were given for the rejections but Doerr, 26, and Culberson, 24, have been sidelined on several occasions in the past with knee injuries. Like Doerr and Culberson, Partee, 25, is married and a father.

The trio is not expected to be recalled for reexamination for at least a month.

This rule against raiders

EVERYONE may have his share of needed things, but none can have another's—the times have made that rule a national "must."

A rationed share for all and for all alike—nothing could be more fair or more essential.

And the same kind of fairness underlies restrictions placed on your purchases of IMPERIAL. Every distillery in America is helping meet the great need for war alcohol, and the present supply of whiskey must be made to last—it's "all there is."

So you may be asked to buy less than you would like of this grand, "velveted" whiskey. But we think you'll agree that some for all is fairer than all for some.

In spite of the whiskey shortage there has been no change in the official price of IMPERIAL except for new federal excise taxes . . . and OPA adjustments.

Touchdowners Plan Postwar Boys' Club

That a Touchdown Club branch of the Washington Boys' Club will be constructed after the war was disclosed at the weekly luncheon of the Touchdown Club yesterday after President Raymond F. Garrity of the Police Boys' Club had accepted a $5000 check presented in behalf of the Touchdowners by President Bob Simmons.

Garrity disclosed that the Touchdown Club already has contributed $25,000 toward the post war building, and Simmons added that this particular branch of the Police Boys' Club will be one of the best equipped in the United States.

Prominent among members of both organizations participating in yesterday's ceremony was Maj. Ernest W. Brown, founder of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club, which this year is observing its 10th anniversary.

T. L. Tsui, executive secretary of the Chinese Embassy, was main speaker at yesterday's luncheon. He revealed that soccer is his country's favorite sport, but that other athletic pastimes also had taken hold of recent years.

Ray Schalk Signs As Chicub Scout; Was Chisox Ace

Chicago, June 6 (AP).—Ray Schalk, one of the greatest catchers of all time, today signed as a scout for the Chicago Cubs.

Schalk, who started his major league career with the Chicago White Sox in 1912, managed the team in 1927 and 1928. He was the White Sox regular catcher for 15 years, playing in 100 games or more each of the 12 seasons. He was a famed battery mate for Big Ed Walsh, the iron-man pitcher for the Sox.

The 51-year-old Schalk led the American League catchers in fielding and putouts from 1913-1922, and caught 151 games in 1920 for a league record.

After resigning as Sox manager in 1928, he was coach for the New York Giants in 1929 and the Chicago Cubs in 1930 and 1931, and from 1932-1940 was manager of Buffalo of the International League and Indianapolis and Milwaukee of the American Association.

Delaware Park, where the jockeys delayed the start of the first race for 20 minutes by refusing to accept mounts, increased its war bond distribution to horsemen by 50 per cent. Bay Meadows contributed its day's profits to war charities.

Both scheduled major league contests, night affairs at Pittsburgh and Brooklyn, were switched to other dates. The two games listed in the International League, whose president, Frank Shaugnessy, said he had "two sons over there and I am not much interested in baseball today," also were postponed.

American Association games at Kansas City, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Minneapolis were called off.

The smaller minors also were dotted with cancellations.

Promoter Herman Taylor said the Angott-Williams bout would be held tomorrow night, weather permitting, in Shibe Park. A Buffalo card also was set back a day. The latter postponement followed orders of Gen. John J. Phelan, New York State Athletic Commission chairman, ordering all Empire State rings to remain dark tonight.

Kavakos Ten to Play

Kavako's Grill will meet Mine Laboratosy tonight in a Northeast Night Softball League game at Washington Stadium. Army Map Service clashes with IMB tomorrow and Buchanan meets Mount Rainier Friday.

WLB Directs Ward and CIO To Extend Pact

By Mary Spargo

While Sewell L. Avery, chairman of Montgomery Ward & Co., was angrily challenging the legality of War Labor Board orders before a House committee yesterday, WLB moved to another showdown by directing the company and its union to extend the terms of their contract pending negotiation of a new agreement.

It appeared evident last night that the new order is likely to start up a second merry-go-round of delay in negotiations, protests, more WLB orders, referral of the case to the President and a second seizure of the Chicago plant, from which Avery was dramatically evicted by soldiers.

Never Agreed to Contract

Earlier in the day the 69-year-old "hero of the Battle of Montgomery Ward & Co." had flatly told the Ramspeck Commitee investigating the first seizure that his concern had never agreed to the 1942 contract, but had bowed to the Presidential will in accepting it.

The ruddy-faced, erect and silver-haired board chairman, who had some difficulty in hearing committee questions, said he was "proud" of his action in refusing to leave the plant until he was carried out by two stalwart military policemen, part of a number who had entered his office with "bayonets fixed at charge."

He pounded the table as he charged the agencies of the Government with having political motives in supporting the CIO union in his concern. He declared that the National Labor Relations Board and the War Labor Board had "conspired" to bring about the seizure of the plant; and added that President Roosevelt had enforced the order even though it was "illegal and unfair," to help the CIO.

It was sheer "hypocrisy" he said, to claim that Montgomery Ward is essential to the war effort or that the strike would have spread to other plants in Chicago and nearby areas.

Avery Flays WLB

He said the War Labor Board should be destroyed "if it doesn't act with some integrity," and asserted that he himself could do a national service if he could choose the industry members of the board so that they would be as faithful to industry as union members are to labor.

WLB, which yesterday ordered extension of the terms of the old contract without further signature of either management or labor, voted 8 to 1 on its new order.

The dissenting vote was cast by H. B. Horton, an industry member who is treasurer of the Chicago Bridge and Iron Co. The two other industry members participating and voting for the order were George M. Mead and Clarence O. Skinner.

Avery charged the industry members of WLB were carefully selected from among those employers who had "capitulated" to labor.

It was following Ward's refusal to extend the old contract, as ordered by WLB last December, that the plant was seized. It was released after a National Labor Relations Board election.

Called on Biddle

On the morning he was evicted from the plant, Avery said, he entered his office to see Attorney General Francis Biddle already there.

He declared that Biddle started to advise him to leave the plant and that he cut in with,

"I want none of your damned advice."

Biddle, according to Avery, turned to the Military Police and said,

"What are you waiting for? Throw him out."

The National Labor Relations Board "gerrymandered" the election which gave the CIO bargaining power, Avery declared.

U. S. Accuses Small-Loan Firms Of Charging 1000% Interest

Antitrust indictments, charging a conspiracy to fix interest rates ranging up to 1000 per cent, were returned yesterday in San Antonio, Tex., against 13 chains of small-loan companies in the South and West.

The Justice Department, announcing the indictment, said the majority of charges ran from 120 to 240 per cent a year. Wendell Berge, assistant Attorney General, estimated that under the agreed schedules the defendants in 1943 alone would have received from 90 million dollars to 180 million dollars interest on loans of approximately 75 million dollars.

40 Corporations Named

Named in the indictments, Attorney General Biddle announced, are 40 corporations and 75 individuals with more than 400 offices in 23 States from the Carolinas to the Pacific Coast.

The United Operating Company, Atlanta, Ga., and Triangle Securities Trust, Nashville, Tenn., are the biggest concerns named. The indictment says both are controlled by Rufus Dewitt King and John M. Ogden, both of Miami, Fla.

Berge reported that complaints have come mainly from servicemen in Southern camps, and from needy family men.

"Thus," he said, "the agreed-upon high interest charges have been assessed in emergency circumstances against persons least able to meet them."

"Slush Funds" Alleged

The indictment charges a conspiracy to create "slush funds" for use in influencing State legislators and city councilmen against regulatory laws.

In a second indictment, the grand jury named 11 corporations and 19 individuals as conspiring for a division of territory under which certain States would be reserved for "high rate" loan companies and so-called "legal rate" concerns would not seek small loan legislation. Both "high rate" and "legal rate" loan firms were named in that indictment.

Berge said his antitrust division of the Justice Department is continuing a general investigation in the banking and credit fields and the San Antonio case "represents only one phase."

New Pump Shown To Md. Foresters

Frederick, Md., June 6 (AP).—Demonstrations of fire prevention and fire fighting equipment today featured the second day's program of the forestry training meeting being held by members of the State Department of Forests and Parks at Camp Airy.

The principal demonstration was that of a power pump, which State Forester Joseph H. Kaylor said would replace as many as 50 men in a firefighting line.

Concluding sessions of the meeting tomorrow will be devoted to a study of the forest conservancy district law, with consideration of the benefits to be derived from timber marking and timber estimating.

Ask Again Tomorrow—

If your dealer does not have El Producto today, ask again tomorrow. The quality cigar shortage is acute but we are trying hard to distribute El Producto fairly so that no dealer is ever out of El Producto for long.

NATURALLY the heaviest demand is for the finest quality. This may answer the question as to why El Producto is out of stock more frequently than any other popular brand.

El Producto's real enjoyment comes from quality—and we will never roll back that quality. We have the armed forces to consider, too. So be patient if sometimes your dealer does not have the El Producto you want for real enjoyment.

The Hour has Struck

THIS IS THE BEGINNING OF THE END FOR THE FORCES OF EVIL!

To the enslaved peoples of Europe D-Day means Deliverance from the oppressor. To right-thinking, freedom-loving citizens the world over, it means the ultimate triumph of Democracy. To the Nazis and their satellites D-Day must inevitably spell Doomsday. But, to those of us on the home front it should mean Determination . . . determination to carry on the tasks before us with renewed vigor. The vastly expanded scope and intensity of War means greatly accelerated expenditures. More and more bond purchases are necessary to carry on the war to the bitter end.

Our boys are treading the blood-stained road to Victory for all mankind. They deserve every ounce of backing we can give them . . . our fervent prayers, our increased devotion to home front duties, and our worldly goods. So, let us not forget our solemn responsibility to carry on as never before . . .

Prayers Mark D-Day In Federal Agencies

D-Day was observed yesterday in Federal agencies. Prayers were predominant. Commerce Department and RFC employes bowed their heads in a minute of silent prayer at noon. Agriculture employes gathered in the patio at noon for prayer. Undersecretary Grover Hill presided. Maritime Commission employes left their desks briefly at noon to hear Commissioner John Carmody urge that they dedicate their efforts to the liberation. Loudspeakers were set up in the inner Pentagon courtyard to give out the latest liberation news during the lunch hour. Navy employes also received up-to-the-minute developments from the department's public address system. Treasury Department employes observed a minute of prayer at noon.

At the State Department, Undersecretary Edward Stettinius sent each employe an inspiring message. Hundreds of employes went to their churches for prayer and the White House suggested that they be excused for the time taken off. The President's prayer was read in many offices. At the Civil Service Commission, President Harry B. Mitchell said he believed the best way for employes to observe D-Day was to work. Employes now have more than ever to work for. In general, the employes took the liberation news very calmly. Of course, they were eager for late news and they speculated on the progress of the drive into France, but the employes also put in a full day's work. War bond salesmen in Federal agencies immediately seized upon the liberation to push the sale of bonds in the Fifth War Loan Drive which will open up soon. Inspired by the liberation, most everyone now is confident that Federal workers will again oversubscribe their quota in record time.

A new assistant chief of the Civil Service investigations divisions has been appointed. He's Walter Elder, who formerly was chief of the commission's Detroit office. He started with the commission as an investigator. . . . The one Government employe who was overjoyed that the liberation started yesterday was Mildred Cobb, an employe in the quotations section in War Food Administration. On April 15, she told her colleagues that the invasion would start on June 6. Now her friends believe she had the inside dope, or that she's a mystic. . . . Since the war the Civil Service Commission has placed 27,000 physically handicapped persons in Federal jobs. Only a minor number of the handicapped people were war veterans.

A recent survey at the Navy Department revealed that 93 per cent of the civilians were satisfied with their supervisors, a surprisingly high number. Much of the Government's turnover has been attributed to poor supervision. However, most Navy supervisors have had to undergo training and the poll shows that it has paid dividends. . . . Foreign Economic Administration has arranged with the Civil Service Commission to get new appointees cleared on loyalty within 14 days of appointment. . . . War Department awards: Francis Brockman of the Adjutant General's Office was awarded $120 for a suggestion that will save thousands of dollars in labor and paper work. Raymond Osborne of the same office was given $20; Virginia Schotter, $10, and Dorothy McDermott, $5, for worthy suggestions.

The CIO has thrown its support behind the Scanlon resolution which would bring about pay raises for Government white-collar workers. Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, has written Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Commission, to urge that hearings be held immediately on the measure. Meantime, CIO's United Federal Workers of America has announced that 26 of the 35 members of Congress it has contacted have indorsed hearings for the resolution. Nine of these members are on the Civil Service Committee which is a majority. These members could force hearings. Six members asked for more time to study the resolution and only three were in opposition.

The resolution would set up a wage board to fix the salaries of white collar Federal workers much the same as the War Labor Board does for private industry. If the same principles were applied to Government employes, they would be given a 15 per cent base increase in salary, the so-called "little steel" formula, and they also would be paid full time-and-a-half for work over 40 hours. However, there appears only little chance that action will be taken on the Scanlon resolution. A hearing or two may be held but the legislation is controversial and Congress is now too anxious to adjourn.

Accident Report

Jake W. Blevins, 47, of 1416 Columbia rd. nw., was injured seriously yesterday when he was struck by a falling building block while doing carpenter work in the center court of the west Spar Barracks in the 900 block of Independence ave. sw. Blevins was admitted to Emergency Hospital for head lacerations and possible skull fracture . . .

D. C. Prayers Accompany U. S. Attack

By Robert Tate Allan

The prayers of thousands of Washingtonians yesterday went with the troops landing in France, as scores of churches and synagogues opened their doors for Liberation Day services.

From early morning until late last night, worshipers of divers races, creeds, nationalities and walks of life streamed into holy places to ask Divine protection for loved ones, and to pray for victory and a just and lasting peace.

They were sober-faced citizens—the Congressmen, servicemen, nurses and others who attended noonday services in St. Peter's Catholic Church on Capitol Hill; the many Government workers who skipped their lunch hour to pray, and the gray-haired mothers who left domestic duties to kneel at altars to ask God to return Johnny safely home.

"They (our fighting men) will need our blessings," President Roosevelt, himself, said in a prayer that was released before its scheduled broadcast last night, so that the public might join in it.

Congressmen at St. Peter's

Congressmen at the St. Peter's services were Representatives Martin Gorski (D., Ill.), George G. Sadowski (D., Mich.), Thomas J. Lane (D., Mass.), Michael A. Feighan (D., Ohio), Richard J. Welsh (R., Calif.), Donald O'Toole (D., N. Y.), Thomas S. Gordon (D., Ill.), Thad F. Wasielewski (D., Wis.), Matthew J. Merritt (D., N. Y.), Maurice J. Sullivan (D., Nev.), and John E. Fogarty (D., R. I.).

Early-bird worshipers on Liberation Day were some Federal workers who dropped in at St. John's Episcopal Church, Lafayette Square, at 6:30 a. m. The church is not generally open until 7 a. m., but when Arthur Butler, the sexton, got the liberation news, he dashed to the church to open its doors at 6 a. m.

Services at St. John's

Among the worshipers at St. John's noonday services was Gilson G. Blake, assistant chief of the division of special war service, State Department; second secretary of the American Embassy in Rome from January 6, 1940, until December 11, 1941, and previously consul there. He came to pray particularly for his two nephews—Marine Sergt. Walter S. Blake, jr., and Allison Blake, recently inducted into the Navy.

Leading Liberation Day prayers at St. John's was the Rev. John G. Magee, missionary to Nanking, China, and temporarily stationed here. His son was Pilot Officer John Magee, jr., Royal Canadian Air Force, who penned the now famous poem, "High Flight," before crashing to his death over England in December, 1941.

Meanwhile, Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders of the Committee on the Religious Life in the Nation's Capital called the city to prayer in a Liberation Day program over WMAL. They were the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of the Washington Episcopal Diocese; the Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Bishop Dun declared:

"Men and women of all faiths, yes, men and women of little faith, must cry out to the God they have known or to the God they long to believe in at such time. We ask for victory, not our victory alone, but God's victory. The victory of good over evil, of freedom over slavery, of decency over brutality, of order over chaos, not for our land alone."

Father Walsh said:

"The American and Allied armies return (to the Continent) on this eventful day to liberate the enslaved populations and rescue the soul of humanity. For well we know that liberty is indivisible and would not long survive in the New World if it had perished in the Old."

Rabbi Gerstenfeld asserted:

"Then men who have landed on the northern coast of France are the witness of mankind's hope in the God of freedom and our faith in eternal justice They come not only with spears and swords, with the javelin of industrial power of the free nations, but they come with a vision of the God of Hosts unto whom is the true battle."

A book of remembrances of the Federation of Churches, containing the names of service folk for whom their relatives have asked prayers, was removed from the Prayer Center of Epiphany Episcopal Church and placed on the altar during the prayer services.

At St. Patrick's Catholic Church, 10th and G sts. nw., the Blesed Sacrament was exposed during the 8 o'clock mass and left exposed all day.

Friends Meeting Houses

Prayer meetings were held in the Friends' Meeting Houses at 2111 Florida ave. nw., and 13th and Fairmont sts. In accordance with a plan of the church, silent prayers for peace were observed in all Quaker homes. Most of the leading Negro churches were open for prayer during the day. Jewish congregations throughout the city sponsored prayer services.

A Liberation Day prayer written by the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, Episcopal presiding bishop, was read at Washington Cathedral services by the Right Rev. Angus Dun, Bishop of Washington, and in other Episcopal churches. Services at the Cathedral also marked the first anniversary of the death of the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, third bishop of Washington.

The Washington Federation of Churches sponsored interdenominational prayer service last night at First Congregational, Chevy Chase Presbyterian, Reformation Lutheran and National Baptist Memorial Churches, and all those churches reported large congregations, despite the rain.

The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Edward L. Buckey, pastor, celebrated solemn benediction last night at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The Rev. John Spence, assistant pastor, offered prayers for the President, Congress, Military and Naval leaders; our fighting men and their kin back home, and intoned the Pope's prayer for peace.

Children Pray for Victory

MASS FOR THE LIBERATION—Heads bowed in prayer, Washington children yesterday joined members of Congress and Federal workers at noon on D-Day in St. Peter's Catholic Church, Second and C sts. se. In the church near the Capitol, they prayed for the success of Allied arms in the liberation of Nazi-occupied Europe, begun with the landing of troops on the northwest coast of France

Allied Landing Fails to Boost Sale of Bonds

News of the Allied landings in France failed to bring any increase in bond sales in the District yesterday, although there was an unprecedented call by bond salesmen for posters and literature.

District War Finance Committee Chairman John A. Reilly, who reported this situation, called on Washington residents to aid the fighting men with the purchase of Government securities.

"D-Day," Reilly said, "makes the Fifth War Loan campaign the most important drive to date. If we need extra incentive to invest in victory and the future of our homes, our country and our future, this is it.

"Let's Inspire Them"

"It is little enough we all can do in this crucial hour to invest every last dollar in Fifth War Loan Bonds. That's the kind of news that gives fighting men the heart and the will to press onward when the going is tough. Let's fire them with the best possible news, let's inspire them in their hour of trial, let's send them the word that we, the people back home, the ones they love and fight for, are in the fight too, right at their side, fighting with every last dollar, every ounce of strength, fighting with a faith and determination that matches in endurance and splendor the valor and stamina they have given the world."

Although banks and bond booths reported that purchases were below average, hundreds of volunteer salesmen notified campaign headquarters that they were opening the local drive to raise $107,000,000 immediately.

Among the first to swing into action yesterday morning were 2000 air raid warden messengers who had been trained the past few weeks for participation in the drive scheduled to open Sunday. Routed out of their homes early yesterday by the news of the landings, they began the door-to-door solicitation for sales.

Daily Rallies Scheduled

Meanwhile, the Interdepartmental War Savings Bond Committee reported that Federal employes have scheduled daily agency bond rallies.

Administrator Leo Crowley will address Foreign Economic Administration employes this afternoon in the Department Auditorium.

Veterans Administration employes will hear an address by Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans Affairs Administration, in rallies scheduled for today and tomorrow. Four group meetings are planned daily in the United States Chamber of Commerce auditorium for agency employes. Navy veterans also will speak and Army Air Forces motion pictures will be shown at each session.

86,000 D. C. School Children Pay Tribute to Liberators

The 86,000 children of Washington's public schools were called into assemblies yesterday to pay tribute to the liberators now entering Europe.

Programs were held simultaneously in all the city's schools at 10:30 a. m. on request of Superintendent Robert L. Haycock.

Typical ceremonies were held on T st. hill ne., at McKinley High, Langley Junior High, and Emery Elementary School.

At McKinley, Principal Frank C. Daniel read from the Bible: "O give thanks unto the Lord, for He is good. . . . He brought them out of darkness and the shadow of death."

Students recited the Lord's Prayer, the Salute to the Flag, and sang the Nation's marching, reverent and patriotic songs.

Daniel told the 1500 boys and girls that D-Day was "a time of rejoicing in one way and yet we must not forget the cost." He said this was the second time he had waited for an armistice as principal of a Washington school, and he hoped that Tech students might soon again assemble to hear of peace.

He counseled the boys and girls to be thoughtful and thankful as they went about their work yesterday, and to remember "Tech boys who are serving today." "When you think of Tech boys in the Air Force, you can remember a Tech boy is leading them," he said. Daniel referred to Maj. Gen. Elwood Quesada, who attended McKinley Technical High School 22 years ago and now heads the Ninth Air Force Fighter Command.

Students at the neighboring Langley Junior High listened to newscasts and commentators broadcast over the auditorium's loud speaker.

At Emery, an outdoor program scheduled for today was moved up a day, and flags were presented four classes which had participated 100 per cent in buying war bonds and stamps. Boys and girls spontaneously adjusted their speeches for D-Day.

"We got the flag because we all cooperated just like everyone is cooperating in the invasion . . . We must do our part like the soldiers are doing their part today . . ." they said. Later, kindergarten students at the school made flags with the American emblem colored on one side and the words D-Day inscribed on the other.

Kin Await News of D. C. Men With Armies of Liberation

Families of Washington men believed to be in the fighting area yesterday read the latest news and listened to the radio with a double interest. While they sought word of the progress of our Army engaged in a bitter struggle, they waited also for word of their husbands, sons or fathers who were probably in the thick of the fighting.

Mrs. Helen A. Quesada of 4716 9th st. nw. yesterday read with confidence the news of the landings on the French coast. Her son, Maj. Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, commander of the Ninth Air Force's fighter planes, was doing a good job.

Accounts of the progress of Allied troops paid tribute to the umbrella of planes that preceded and accompanied the landings. Then there were the first-hand accounts of the preparation that her son had made for D-Day that paid tribute to his leadership and to the fighting spirit that he instilled in his men.

At 40 he was one of the Nation's youngest general officers, with a 20-year flying career. He was a pilot for Explorer Martin Johnson on an African expedition and, at one time, flying aide to Gen. Hugh Johnson. He also had piloted one of the two craft which flew to the rescue of the German plane, Bremen, forced down in Labrador on the first east-west crossing of the Atlantic. He was for 10 years engineering officer at Bolling Field and had participated in the North African and Italian campaigns.

Thomas T. Mott sr., commercial banker here, read a letter from his son, Lieut. Thomas T. Mott, jr., which arrived yesterday and then studiously avoided listening to news bulletins on D-Day, he said last night.

Lieutenant Mott was a navigator on a Flying Fortress named Sad Sak II, after the comic character in Stars and Stripes. He made 47 missions over Germany, was decorated six times, and now has been relieved from combat to accept administrative duty with airborne troops. His father lives at 6920 Glenbrook rd., Bethesda, Md.

Frank Magnanelli of 4601 Cheltenham dr., Bethesda, an employe of the GPO, was at work early yesterday when news of Allied landings in France was brought to him by fellow workers.

It was scarcely good news. Two of his four sons have been stationed in England. Both Peter, a veteran of the African campaign, and Frank, jr., are first-class privates with the Army Engineers and have been undergoing training in clearing mine fields, repairing roads and reconstructing bridges.

A third son, John, is in the South Pacific, and a fourth, George, on his way overseas.

Mrs. Carolyn Shlanta, wife of 22-year-old Corpl. Michael Shlanta, who was "somewhere in England" when D-Day dawned, with the Ninth Troop Carrying Command, heard the big news over her radio at 6:30 a. m. She and a sister-in-law live at 1809 Newton st. nw.

Corporal Shlanta's mother, who also lives at the Newton st. address, is now in Pennsylvania.

D.C. Outwardly Calm at News Of Landings

Prayer meeting were swiftly organized in Government departments. The Blood Donor Center was bombarded with calls of volunteers eager to give vital fluid from their own veins to ease the suffering of the wounded. One group of 40 girls employed in a Washington insurance office was at the center by 11 a. m. and had made their contributions to the blood bank and returned to their desks within an hour.

In the Navy Department, communiques and late dispatches were read to employes over a loudspeaker system as they were received. At noon, Ralph A. Bard, Assistant Secretary of Navy, made a brief address to employes and introduced Capt. S. W. Salisbury, acting head of the Chaplain Corps of the Nevy, who read a prayer for members of the fleet.

At the War Department's huge Pentagon Building, "D-Day" was taken in stride. Hundreds of officers, many of whom had worked for weeks and months to see that every last bit of equipment, that every last man was at his designated place when "H-Hour" came, leaned back in their chairs and awaited developments. There were no special prayer services, though many War Department employes stopped at churches on the way to and from work to pray.

The Veterans Administration held a two-minute prayer service at 10 a. m. and employes pledged to redouble their efforts to see that servicemen received their just compensations for the sacrifices they are even now making.

In District Court, 110 candidates for United States citizenship stood solemnly as they heard a prominent Washington attorney ask: "What have I done today that a boy should die for me tonight?"

The speaker, Milton W. King, president of the District Bar Association, addressed the prospective citizens as they waited in Justice James W. Morris' courtroom to take the oath. As Justice Morris entered the courtroom, a deputy United States marshal added to his "all rise!" the prayer:

"God save the state! May God bless and protect the armed forces."

Elsewhere in District Court, the sedition trial droned on.

At Walter Reed Hospital, Gen. John J. Pershing, who led American doughboys over the fields of France to victory against the Gertrymen to share his confidence that American boys would again "win through to victory" in their second major battle with the forces of the Reich on the continent.

Navy Yard Staff Praised

Praising Navy Yard employes for their work in the war effort, Rear Admiral F. L. Reichmuth, commandant of the yard, spoke briefly yesterday to the employes who help to manufacture munitions and guns, concerning the landings in France.

The admiral said: "I feel sure all of you take pride in the fact that your efforts are now being realized in the great naval armada now engaged in the assault upon the enemy in western Europe."

Later the employes joined President Roosevelt in his prayer at 10 o'clock last night for the liberation forces. The President's words were piped into the yard through the public address system in order to reach all employes.

Talk Strategy

Service Folk Feel Show's on Without Them

By Adele Bernstein

Most of the service men and women in Washington were still a little goggle-eyed yesterday over the invasion news from Europe.

They started off usually with great nonchalance: "Of course, I was expecting it right along . . ." But a minute later found them heatedly arguing strategy, timing and their own all-important roles with the interviewer, their buddies and anyone else who happens to be within earshot.

Two young paratroopers, their training scarcely dry on their high-laced boots, fidgeted nervously, killing time in the United Nations Service Center before reporting back to camp in North Carolina.

"And That Means to Us!"

"I hardly knew how I felt when I heard the news, Pvt. Harold Cavender, of Akron, Ohio, grinned shyly, nudging his companion, Cpl. William Jackson, of Hollywood, Calif.

"We sort of expected it," they began at the same moment. Corporal Jackson took over: "I guess we'll just have to wait. Anything can happen. And that means to us." He fingered his parachute insignia.

In the lounge at the Center, soldiers and sailors sat down in the scattered chairs, rose, walked to the newspaper-littered tables, wandered back again, looking a bit aimless.

Upstairs, at a battered upright piano, 19-year-old fire controlman, third class, Irving Underwood of Salem, Ore., banged away wildly on what he called "the invasion mareh." Seaman Second Class John R. Johnson, Anderson, Ind., a salt of 17, listened approvingly. They had heard the news of American landings only at noon, having been innocently asleep up to then.

Suspects Other Landings

"Well," said Seaman Johnson, "there's no future in being a civilian now. But what bothers me is that we didn't land at more places—less fortified, like southern France. Anyway, I bet we've made half a dozen landings, only they won't let on for a while. You'll see. Maybe I'll see even sooner."

Out in the sunshine a conclave of sailors, soldiers and marines argued busily and with great authority about where the next blow would be struck.

On F st. at 13th a tall Marine bought the latest newspaper editions. "I'm sort of out of things myself," he said, staring at the headlines. "I was in Guadalcanal, Bougainville, and a coupla other places where I got a tropical disease.

"But if you'd like to know, things would really be popping—and I do mean popping—if the boys I was out with in the Pacific were in France right now. Not that I'm belittling," he grinned. "They try."

Two Spars, Corpls. Anne Valle of Greensburg, Pa., and Elizabeth Armstrong of Bangor, Me., said promptly that it was just what they had personally expected. "We like the idea of being in the service at this time. Makes you feel better," they declared.

A trio of Wacs, hurrying down Pennsylvania ave., however, did not want to talk much about the invasion. "As far as we're concerned," one of them, a private, said in explanation, "we're still here and all that's happening in Europe. I, for one, thought I'd be in North Africa, at least, by now." The others nodded sympathetically.

Before the open door of the Church of the Epiphany, on G st., between 13th and 14th sts., nw., a Wave paused, wiped her eyes, adjusted the officer's insignia on her cap, and went into the cool darkness.

Hope of Son's Furlough Dims On War News

One of the worried but undaunted parents in the District yesterday was Louis Martin, 44, a linotype machinist for The Washington Post, whose son, Harry, 19, had already completed 27 bomber missions over Europe as the radio bombardier of a Flying Fortress.

MARTIN

"The boy's score was going up so fast," Martin said when he heard the news of the landings on the Continent, "that we thought we'd have him home for a spell when he had completed that 50th bonus mission. I guess now though he'll probably be over there for awhile."

Now Staff Sergeant

Young Martin enlisted in the AAF while he was still in high school, his father said and added, "he was such a big kid we didn't have the nerve to say 'no.'"

The youngster trained at Scott Field, Ill.; Las Vegas, Nev., and Rapid City, S. Dak., and the Army Air Base at Tampa, Fla.

Playgrounds Mark D-Day

D-Day ceremonies for children were held in the nine playgrounds of the D. C. Recreation Department, Region I, in the Northeast section, yesterday afternoon.

Following a preconceived plan, Clarence Pendleton, director, ordered the ceremonies which included a salute to the flag and the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

City Fathers Ask Prayers For Victory

First official action of the District Commissioners on Liberation Day was to call upon the citizens of the Capital to unite in prayer for the safety and victory of our fighting men.

In a proclamation to Washingtonians, issued as the first order of business yesterday, the Commissioners asked for a redoubling of efforts to support the war, for donations of blood to the wounded through the Red Cross, and stronger financial support of European liberation by increased purchase of war bonds.

"By now, we have all heard the news of the great campaign our boys and their Allies are waging against a common enemy," the text of the Commissioner's proclamation read. "Many of our citizens have husbands, sons, fathers and other relatives engaged in this mighty effort. We in Washington, as in all American homes, will be watching and waiting for future developments.

Redoubled Effort Asked

"You may best serve by redoubling your efforts on the home front. The American Red Cross will need your blood donations. The families of the men on the batle front will be heartened and encouraged by your remaining at your posts of duty. You may help, too, by the increased purchase of Victory Bonds.

"Let us all unite in the fervent prayer for the safety of our boys."

In keeping with the Commissioners' proclamation, business went on as usual in the District Building.

During the day many relatives of men overseas slipped out of the District Building to pray at the nearest church of their faith. No one kept count and no supervisor questioned the brief absences as the District's business moved steadily along.

Throngs Watch Bulletin Board

Almost hesitantly, but insistently, the question, "Is there more news?" followed reporters as they made their rounds of the building. Cab drivers, in the District Building on business, reported that their fares had talked little or not at all about the invasion, but had listened quietly and intently to news reports.

One massive hacker, wearing the American Legion button on his shirt, said, "When I heard the news this morning I cried. Now, I don't care to talk about it much, but I want to get all the news I can. Yes, I served in France in the last war."

From the windows of the District Building press room the crowds around The Post bulletin board could be observed all day across Post Square. District Building reporters could tell when new bulletins from the three wire services were posted by the greater number of pedestrians who stopped to read the latest liberation news. Many returned again and again.

D-Day Crime Drops

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, police superintendent, reported that D-Day proved to be one of the quietest, so far as his department was concerned, that he has ever experienced.

He said a check of the precincts indicated that even minor crime was at an unusually low ebb and surprising enough there were fewer intoxicants hauled into precinct stations than is usually the case. "The city," he said, "was quiet and well behaved."

When D-Day came, there were 265 former District policemen in the armed forces. How many of these were in the theater of invasion operations Kelly was unable to say.

Double Rainbow Over Capitol Seen As 'Good Omen'

When a double rainbow appeared over the Capitol during last night's storm several persons phoned to report it and to inquire if it were a "good omen" following so soon our landings in France.

However, the Weather Bureau explained a rainbow depends upon the angle of vision and the spot the sun is in, in relationship to the observer.

Technically, the weatherman explained, a 'secondary rainbow is caused by two refractions and two reflections instead of two refractions and one reflection. All this means that the sunlight performed some extra bends while going through the raindrops.

A double rainbow is rather rare but as many as five rainbows are possible, he said. The purity of color depends upon the size and uniformity of the raindrops.

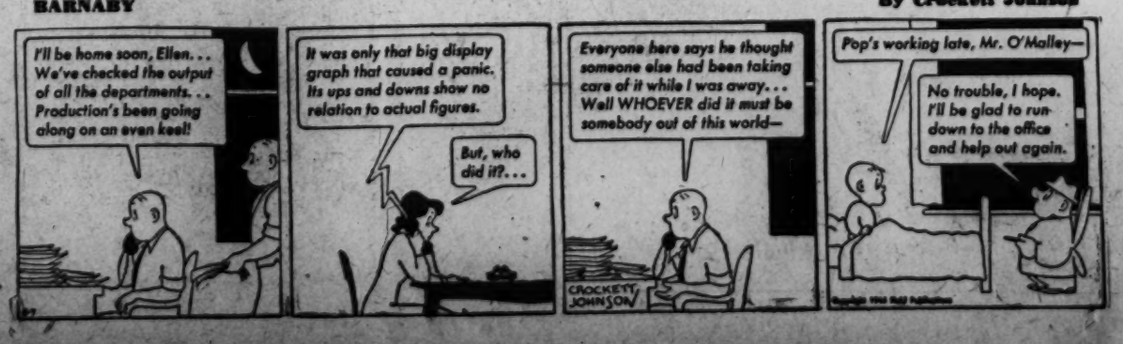
BARNABY — By Crockett Johnson



I'll be home soon, Ellen... We've checked the output of all the departments... Production's been going along on an even keel!
It was only that big display graph that caused a panic. Its ups and downs show no relation to actual figures.
But, who did it?...
Everyone here says he thought someone else had been taking care of it while I was away... Well WHOEVER did it must be somebody out of this world—
Pop's working late, Mr. O'Malley—
No trouble, I hope. I'll be glad to run down to the office and help out again.

Hitler Embarrassed, Ousted Bund Bloc, Gissibl Testifies

By James E. Chinn

Der Fuehrer Hitler and the German Embassy in Washington were "embarrassed" by activities of their nationals in the German-American Bund, so orders were issued for them to get out but "stay active" in promoting Nazi interests, Peter Gissibl, former leader of the Chicago unit of the organization testified yesterday at the mass sedition trial.

Gissibl, completing his direct testimony for the Government, said that this situation led to the reorganization of the bund in 1936—the German nationals were forced to resign and only Americans or naturalized citizens of German extraction were allowed to remain on the membership rolls, giving the organization a 100 per cent American front.

Herded Into Another Bund

In previous testimony Gissibl had disclosed that German nationals cast out of the bund were herded into another bund organized and controlled by the Prospective Citizens League and were "just as active as before" in propagandizing Nazi philosophies and ideologies.

The former Chicago bund leader was called to the witness stand for final direct examination after Assistant Prosecutor Joseph W. Burns had read to the jury a 1200-word explanation why the bund was reorganized, writen by the witness' brother, Fritz Gissibl, which appeared December 30, 1935, in the Deutcher Weckruf und Beobachter, official bund organ. Fritz Gissibl, at that time, was leader of the Friends of New Germany, immediate predecessor of the bund. A few months later he returned to Germany and became one of the "big shots" in the Nazi Party—director of the propaganda ministry and an official of the Foreign Department.

Burns developed in questioning Peter Gissibl that his brother had told him things in conversation about the reorganization that did not appear in the long statement—that the real reason for the shakeup was the embarrassment caused the German government and the German embassy by the activities of the nationals associated with the bund. He quoted his brother as saying that the Nazi government had "no objection" to the nationals staying "active" after resigning from the bund.

Text of Statement:

Fritz, however, had this to say in his published statement:

"The new year will also bring about a change in the internal and external structure of our bund which is basic since from now on the field of political activity is left to those of our comrades and co-fighters who possess the honor of American citizenship, while at the same time all German nationals leave the bund in order to continue to dedicate themselves only to the economic struggle. . . . It has arisen from the consideration that the homeland will no more permit itself to be shaped politically by members of other nations, than countries abroad can rightfully require that leaders of political movements possess the right of citizenship of the fatherland of their adoption."

"If this order from the old home country perhaps appears a bit surprising to you," the statement added, "please do not take it as somewhat of a reprimand. It was necessary in the interests of the German Reich."

Defense counsel objected vigorously to admission into evidence of the Fritz Gissibl statement as well as the conversation Peter Gissibl said he had with his brother concerning reorganization of the bund. Justice Edward C. Eicher overruled en masse the entire collection of objections as well as a motion of E. Hilton Jackson, attorney for Gerald B. Winrod, calling for removal from the trial record of every word of testimony to date on the ground that it was irrelevant.

Defense attorneys also complained that the Government was "cluttering up the record" with German language exhibits and their English translations. Albert W. Dilling, representing his former wife, Elizabeth Dilling, described the introduction of these exhibits "boring and irrelevant."

"A halt should be called," declared Attorney Ben Lindas, "or this case will never end."

D. C. Captain Denies Guilt Of Sex Charges

Santa Ana, Calif., June 6 (AP).—Capt. Morrison J. Wilkinson, jr., of Washington, D. C., pleaded innocent before a general court-martial today to a series of charges including rape and bigamy, and the trial judge advocate outlined in detail a long list of sex offenses of which the flier is accused.

Wilkinson, 28, a veteran of combat flying in China, entered a general denial to charges for which the death penalty could be invoked.

The judge advocate, Maj. James D. Garibaldi, told the 10-man court he would show that Wilkinson, on April 13, attempted to rape a 15-year-old girl.

The following night, Garibaldi alleged, Wilkinson met a woman, whose identity was withheld, at a cafe and in her apartment attempted to force her into a perverted sex act. The next night, April 15, Garibaldi asserted he performed a similar act with another unidentified woman.

On April 17, Garibaldi declared, Wilkinson forced his estranged wife, Margaret Gonzales Wilkinson, to submit to an unnatural sex act.

It was April 20, Major Garibaldi asserted, when the young officer met Miss Caprice Caprone, a dancer, at a cafe and drove her into the Hollywood hills, where he attempted to force her into various sex acts.

Stolen Stocks Bill

A bill introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), would provide a uniformity of stock regulations in the District, aimed at protecting the "innocent" buyer of stolen stocks. It was referred to the Senate District committee.

News of D-Day Told First Lady by President

By Genevieve Reynolds

Just what hour the First Lady learned of the invasion Monday night is still a conjecture. Pressed for an answer by the women scribes at her press conference yesterday, she smilingly dodged the issue. Nor could she conveniently remember the number of hours she slept after hearing the news. However, she revealed that the President was the first to break the news to her.

Looking as if she had spent a sleepless night, Mrs. Roosevelt commented: "The European invasion has been hanging over most of our heads like a sword. It was almost a sense of relief when the sword fell."

Then she went on to point out that the invasion within itself is not too important—that it is only the first step—because of the hard fighting that lies ahead. She spoke sympathetically and understandingly of the great anxiety of mothers whose sons are with the invading forces. "It's no happy moment," she declared.

Writes Message in Spanish

Early yesterday morning, Mrs. Roosevelt broadcast a message to the women of the country.

It was one of encouragement . . . that everything has to end and that the women will continue to go through the ordeals in the future as bravely as they have in the past. Last night she broadcast a message to the women of Latin America. It was one which she wrote herself in Spanish.

Except for a few speaking engagements the First Lady expects to spend a quiet summer at her Hyde Park home. She will have with her a number of children, probably her grandchildren, but whom, she didn't say. As usual, she will do some canning.

Won't Attend Convention

So far Mrs. Roosevelt has no plans to attend the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, she said yesterday. Before taking leave of Washington for the summer, she will attend a conference here June 14, sponsored by a group of women's organization who are trying to inculcate in the women of the country a consciousness of their responsibilities in world affairs.

About noon tomorrow she will visit the official opening of the new United States Army recruiting office of the Women's Corps at 1400 Pennsylvania ave.

During the summer she will address a group of farm women at Red Hook, N. Y. Later, she will talk before the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs and the Syracuse Democratic Women's Club. At Rhineback, N. Y., near Hyde Park, she will attend a meeting of the League of Women Voters. A trip to Henderson and Wright Fields, Antioch College and Lake Junaluska, N. C., are other places on her schedule.

Col. Elliott Roosevelt, who is in charge of photographic reconnaissance, is the only member of the President's family in the invasion area now, according to the First Lady.

IT'S ABOUT TIME to consider this method of using small bits of soap. Make a bath mitt of terry cloth. Make a pocket in one side of it. The pocket holds the odds and ends of soap. The mitt is especially fine for showers.

Picture Dark For Jewry, Says Goldmann

Half of European Jewry will perish in this war. Even if the war ends tomorrow the damage has been done. Instead of the seven to eight million in central-eastern Europe there are only two or three million at best. So declared Dr. Nahum Goldmann, representative in the city, Jewish Agency of Palestine, guest speaker at Washington Chapter of Hadassah's twenty-third annual spring luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel.

He pictured the Jews as destitute and impoverished before the war. Now the bulk will be even more poverty stricken.

Calls for Interpretation

Deploring lack of understanding of Jewish history, Dr. Goldmann pointed out that the rabbis should do a better job of interpretation for the laymen. "This invasion today has great significance for the Jewish people," he said, "also on the World Jewish Congress and the Distribution Committee."

Approximately 1000 were present at the luncheon yesterday, whereas in 1921 only 60 attended a similar affair. Mrs. Aaron Shalowitz, president of Washington Hadassah, presided.

A musical program preceded the main speech. Rabbi Solomon Metz gave the opening prayer. Mrs. Henry A. Hirsh, luncheon chairman, gave a brief talk.

Good Grooming Is Stressed As Job Asset

The next two months will see another crop of girl graduates heading for employment offices. Uncle Sam has jobs saved up in his Army and Navy for most of the boys who will be graduated from high school, but the girls are free to decide where they can make their talents and their knowledge of greatest value to their country.

Good grooming is all-important, not only in applying for a job but in getting ahead on the job. Wear appropriate clothes. Bobby socks and a kerchief were all right on the campus but they are not considered "business dress" by most employers. Look trim, clean, and neat from the top of your head to your shoes if you want to get off to a good start.

Remember that cleanliness and personal daintiness is essential to your own happiness and other people's comfort. Nothing is more disagreeable to others than the odor of unwashed clothes or an unwashed body. Personnel directors state that one of their biggest problems is to impress this upon women employes, many of whom apparently do not realize how often they offend in this respect.

Child Can Be 'Sold' More Home Jobs

Children of 8 years and older usually are able to give a great deal more help around the house than many mothers require of them. Right now, when every pair of hands should be serving Uncle Sam, parents should give youngsters every chance to be useful. The summer vacation may be a good time to begin.

Jobs that children can take on include dishwashing, setting tables, hanging up their clothes and putting soiled garments in hampers, washing out the tub and basin after bathing or hand-washing, helping to hang out the wash, feeding farm animals or pets, making beds, dusting.

The method of assigning work that is used at many summer camps, often goes well within the family. Show the youngsters how their aid will make it possible for mother to give more time to the Victory garden, or work part-time in a factory or store, or free her to have some real playtime with the children themselves. Then, on a blackboard ar a sheet of paper, write the jobs expected of each child during a specified period. Some children like to be surprised with a different task each day.

Vitamin B Found in Most Foods Lessening Necessity for Pills

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Vitamin B is the most puzzling of all vitamins. In the first place it is the most complex chemically. Whereas up to 1919 we thought it was a single and fairly simple structure, it now is known to be composed of many elements, some of which have been identified chemically—such as thiamine, riboflavin, nicotinic acid, pyridoxine and pantothenic acid and each plays its own role in nutrition, and each, if it is absent, allows a different sort of disease condition to appear—neuritis or pellagra, or sore mouth as the case may be.

We know that Vitamin B is absolutely necessary for life, and adults as well as children need some of it every day. Also the body cannot synthesize it, but must have it supplied in the food. In this it differs from some of the other vitamins. Vitamin D is necessary in young life, but adults get along with very little. Also the body can synthesize Vitamin D from the action of sunshine on the skin. If you get some Vitamin C every once in a while you do all right, not necessarily all the time.

B Vitamin in Most Foods

Naturally with such a very necessary article nearly all foods contain it, and it would hardly be possible for a person to eat any kind of a mixed diet without obtaining a good daily supply.

I regard wholesale dosing with vitamin capsules and extracts as foolish and unnecessary. Not that I have any doubts about the absolute necessity of getting the vitamins, but I prefer Nature's way of providing them and that is in the food. Another of my beliefs is that I do not see that the vitamin deficiencies are so frequent that extra preventive care should be instituted. But in the case of vitamin B1 I am willing to admit that circumstances occasionally arise when some minor forms of deficiency occur even when the vitamin is present in the food.

One of these, for instance, is diabetic neuritis. We know that one definite entity ascribable to Vitamin B deficiency is neuritis. Typically it is the form known as beri-beri found mostly in the Orient.

Used For Fatigue

Again Vitamin B is often recommended for fatigue and loss of appetite. Undoubtedly it does control appetite and is valuable in regulating the bowels and hence preventing constipation. The spectacle, however, of thousands of people dosing themselves with Vitamin B tablets to help that tired feeling is not one that appeals to a real scientist.

Under certain circumstances the use of Vitamin B for fatigue is more scientific. Particularly I refer to life in the tropics. Vitamin B is readily excreted in the perspiration, so the resident of the tropics may lose his Vitamin B so fast in the perspiration that he needs a more abundant supply than his neighbor of the temperate zones. Certainly the effect of a tropical climate on producing that tired feeling gives considerable support to this view.

Be Your Own Hair Stylist With Expert Permanent

By Martha Ellyn

The summer hairdo should be one that "can take it." It is the easy-to-handle coiffure that busy women are seeking today. Beauty salons too are advocating that women learn to shampoo and set their own hair. Short-handed on operators, they find it impossible to serve all the patrons who ask for appointments.

Martha Ellyn

A new type of permanent wave has been created which hair stylists say can be home-styled with greater ease and better results than former waves because it leaves the hair soft and more natural looking. It is a machine permanent that requires less time to give. A velvet-like cream is brushed into the hair. Steam pads, with not the faintest trace of ammonia are used. The heating time has been cut to a minimum. Hair dryness is counteracted because of the oil steaming. This new procedure will not discolor white hair or adversely affect dyed or bleached hair.

UPWARD AND FORWARD is the coiffure shown here. Such a hair arrangement can be effected at home if a good permanent is the basis

Shampoo Necessary

The coiffeur who told me about this new type of permanent also gave suggestions as to how women may set their own hair. Of course a good shampoo is needed, with the hair free of every bit of soap film. If the hair is especially dry, he suggests an oil treatment. For best results, leave the oil on the hair overnight. Heat oil and apply to all parts of scalp with a cotton swab. Wrap the head in a towel and secure it carefully, so when you waken in the morning the pillow will not be oil-saturated. Shampoo hair thoroughly. It will take at least two thorough sudsings to free the hair of oil. Rinse hair thoroughly, until when pulled through the fingers it fairly squeaks.

Develop Talent

Next brush the hair and place a piece of gauze around head to keep hair in place about the hair line. If hair is short, leave it dry without benefit of pin curls. When hair is dry, brush the ends into desired arrangement. If hair is long, tie gauze around head in same manner as for short hair. Brush long hair and arrange as it is worn, and let it dry.

Many women believe they have no talent for handling their own hair. To look at some heads it appears that the owners don't carry on very effectively between visits to the beauty salon. It makes just as much sense to learn to style your own hair as it does to know how to cook or sew.

Whittle Inches Off Your Waistline

By Ida Jean Kain

To have a neat, tidy and young waistline, this measurement must be eight inches smaller than the bust, and of course, your weight at normal. If you are willing to stretch, twist and bend, you can whittle your middle to exact specifications. And with a slim supple waist, you'll feel as much better as you look.

Here's your exercise program . . . but you have to take it daily. Start with a stretch-bend:

Stand erect, feet slightly apart, arms in an arc overhead, fingers clasped. Pull up slim through the middle section, all through the rib cage. Do not hunch the shoulders as you stretch. Now slowly bend acutely to the side, back to position, then bend to the other side. Do not let the hips bow out at the sides as you bend. Stretch and bend six times for a starter, later work up gradually to 25 counts.

Twist Off Pounds

You can twist off the inches by anchoring the hips as you twist at the waist. Stand with the back of the hips against a heavy table or a desk, hands clasped on top of head, shoulders relaxed. First stretch slim through the midriff, then twist vigorously at the waistline, first in one direction, then the other, but hold the upstretch as you twist. Perform six counts, and gradually work up to 20.

Tighten Abdominal Muscles

Here is another exercise to anchor the hips so as to center all the twist at the waistline. This exercise combines stretching, twisting and bending. Sitting on floor with legs stretched wide apart, arms straight out at sides, shoulder level. Start with the lower abdominal muscles and pull forcibly upward, hold the up pull, twist sharply at the waist, then bend to touch fingers of left hand to outstretched toes. Come back to position, make it a point to pull slim again through the middle before twisting at the waist to the opposite side and bending. You can repeat this exercise eight times as a starter, and gradually work up to 25 counts.

The secret of waist whittling is to take a little exercise every day, but not to overdo at the beginning and to make each movement very accurate. You're going to be amazed at what specific exercises can do for your waist measure in a short time.

To vary your waistliners, send for "Waistlines and Beltlines," enclosing stamped addressed envelope to Ida Jean Kain at The Washington Post.

The President Gives Dinner For Visitor

Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of Poland, who arrived in Washington Monday will be guest of honor at a dinner given by President Roosevelt at the White House this evening.

Among other entertainments arranged in honor of the distinguished visitor are a dinner on Friday evening at which the Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski, will be host and a dinner tomorrow evening by Undersecretary of State Edward Stettinius. The Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska are planning a reception later in the week for the Premier.

Famous Hostess Feted, Here to Visit Friends

By Marie McNair

She has entertained practically every celebrity in Europe, she has laughed and cried with the grubbiest Cockneys in London. Her fame as one of the really great hostesses has spread to this side of the Atlantic. And she is known on both sides of the ocean for her wit, her many kindnesses.

She's truly a great lady. Her name is Mrs. Claude Beddington and she's in Washington at the Sulgrave Club for a fortnight to see old friends. Her engagement book is already filled, yet she hasn't had time since she arrived Saturday to let all her friends know she is here. She has lunched with Mrs. Joseph Davies, will dine with the British Minister and Lady Campbell, and Monday night was a guest at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss.

Yesterday Baroness Stackelberg, whom she first met in London entertained for her at the Mayflower and she has a date with Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe for the National Symphony Orchestra Watergate concert next Sunday evening.

Always Same Remark

One of the first remarks put to her on introduction is apt to be, "But you don't look English." And it's quite true. She has soft and appealing deep brown eyes, hair as black as a raven's wing and although she's a grandmother, her figure is supple and slender.

Some day one of her young grandsons expects to bring his coronet to the gentlemen's cloakroom of the House of Lords.

"Why should I look English?" Mrs. Beddington will counter. "I'm thirty-fourth in descent from Charlemagne and my grandfather is thirty-fourth in descent from a cattle thief—King Niall of Ireland—who had the gall to divide up Ireland into nine sections, giving a part to each of his sons."

In London, at Diana Beddington's salons all the famous artists, writers, political and diplomatic leaders were certain to meet. She has often said there should be a placard above her door, "Invisible Mending Done Here," for as often as not diplomatic breaches would be healed, political questions solved, old jealousies ironed out and threatening situations averted.

Personality Is Complex

A complex personality, Mrs. Beddington one minute will tear your heart strings at the piano and in the next will show her office to her guests, a large room complete with ediphone, card-index system and a professional set-up down to the last detail. But whatever she does, such as making addresses, entertaining at banquets, visiting the destitute, the sick, is done out of the goodness of her heart and is put down in her book as "good works."

"A cat lives nine lives. I live ten," says this quick-speaking, quick-thinking person. Show her an underdog, a lost cause and she jumps in with both feet to better the situation. To her the thrill comes when she takes a struggling unknown artist and builds him into a star. It's like taking a yearling and making him a Derby winner, she says.

Her Shooting Stick Famous

It was resourceful Mrs. Beddington who introduced the shooting stick to drawing rooms in Mayfair. Hers is now famous, although a bit worn. Taking the cue from sportsmen who could sit comfortably on a grouse drive, Mrs. Beddington had her rubber-tipped shooting stick designed for her own above-the-average height, covered it with antique brocade and brought it out at cocktail parties.

"Only those with race-horse legs and a Rolls-Royce chassis would dare use it" she says with a twinkle in her eye. "If you really had fallen arches or sagging muscles, you wouldn't want to let the rest of the world know it."

There was another little innovation which this original lady dreamed up. That was to have her Rolls-Royce made into a convertible Pullman, because of an abhorrence of sleeping cars.

The author of a book, "All That I Have Met," the title taken from Tennyson's "Ulysses," Mrs. Beddington is at work on another. Like the first it will contain anecdotes of noted personages who have been her friends. "There's more ink than blood in my veins," she says. "My mother was a niece of Miss Braddon who wrote the famous "Lady Audrey's Secret," and my father's cousin, Dinah Mulock, wrote "John Halifax, Gentleman," whose success was largely due to its beautiful English and style."

MISS PATRICIA McKNEW Bachrach
. . . Made Debut in Washington

Patricia McKnew's Parents Tell Of Engagement to Capt. Nielsen

Maj. and Mrs. Donald Harrison McKnew announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia, to Capt. Arthur C. Nielsen, jr., Corps of Engineers.

Miss McKnew attended Madeira School and made her debut in Washington and at the Bachelors' Cottilion in Baltimore in 1939. She was graduated from Bryn Mawr College in 1943. The bride-to-be is the granddaughter of the late Col. and Mrs. Henry P. Kingsbury and of the late Mrs. Charles Ray Dean. She is a provisional member of the Junior League.

Stationed in Baltimore

Captain Nielsen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Nielsen of Winnetka, Ill. A graduate of University of Wisconsin, class of 1941, he is at present stationed in Baltimore. He is a member of Sigma Phi, Beta Gamma Sigma, Phi Kappa Phi and Phi Eta Sigma fraternities and of the Iron Cross and Scabbard and Blade.

The wedding is expected to take place in the near future, depending on Captain Nielsen's orders.

Major McKnew has just been reassigned to duty in Washington from Asheville, N. C., where he has been stationed for the past year. His family are now at their summer home at Gibson Island, Md.

Another Bride-Elect

Mrs. Isaac Thomas Woodson, Louisville, Ky., announced the engagement of her daugnter, Virginia, to Joseph Haidacher, Washington, formerly of Chicago.

The bride-elect was graduated from Kentucky Home School, Louisville University, and Western Reserve School of Library Science. Mr. Haidacher is an accountant with Federal War Agency.

Their wedding will take place June 14.

Rep. Rayburn, The Jacksons Dinner Guests

The Speaker of the House, Representative Sam Rayburn, and Justice and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson were ranking guests at the dinner last evening given by Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Mrs. Thomas McGinley of Pittsburgh.

The Counselor of the Yugoslav Embassy and Mme. Rybar, who have been spending several days at the Ritz-Carlton in New York, left yesterday for Rehoboth Beach, Del., to spend a week with friends.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Sidney Wolfe entertained at luncheon yesterday.

Col. Burdette Fitch, who recently returned from Australia, has gone with Mrs. Fitch to Hot Springs, Va., for a holiday. They are at the Homestead.

Lieut. Charles Buscher, USNR, who has been on sea duty for two years, is on leave from the West Coast and is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Buscher of Four Corners, Md., for a few weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. George N. Everett of Washington are guests at the Homestead, Hot Springs, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Everett (the former Miss Alice E. Webster) were married at St. Alban's Episcopal Church by the Rev. Charles T. Warner on Thursday, May 25. They will return to their homes at 3134 Ellicott st.

Miss Faith Jouvenal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Jouvenal of Silver Spring, Md., will leave today for Salem, Mass., to be guest of Miss Carolyn Bates, daughter of Representative and Mrs. George J. Bates. Both girls are classmates at Trinity College, where they have just completed their sophomore year.

Miss Baumann Is Bride-Elect

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Baumann announce the engagement of their daughter, Margaret Etta, to Ensign Richard Walker Whitney, USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. N. Whitney of Marblehead, Mass. Miss Baumann attended David-Lipscomb College in Nashville, Tenn., and is a member of Beta Sigma Phi sorority.

Ensign Whitney, now stationed at Solomons, Md., received his commission from the Midshipmen's School at Northwestern University. He was graduated from University of Maine with the degree of bachelor of science and hed two years at the Medical School of George Washington University before entering the Navy. He is a member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity and the medical fraternity, Nu Sigma Nu.

Wedding will take place in the near future, exact date contingent upon Ensign Whtiney's orders.

General 'Talks' to Sons In Solitude of His Garden; Tidbits Heard on 'The Hill'

CAPITAL CAMEO: Almost any evening shortly before dusk Maj. Gen. Emory S. Adams may be seen making his way to the garden of his home on 34th st. He sits there alone, for a long, long time; seems to be lost in thought.

"When I'm out there, all by myself," he told Mrs. Adam the other day, "I feel I am talking to the boys."

"The boys" are, of course, the two sons of the former Adjutant General and Mrs. Adams—the two sons who have been on the fighting front most of the past two years. The elder, Johnny, is now a commando in the Pacific area; his brother, Emory S., jr.—better known, as is his father, as "Hank"—is a paratrooper in the European theater. Both are hoping they'll meet up with each other one of these days . . . and can help fight out the war, side by side, as brothers should.

HERE AND THERE DEPT.: The Hon. Robert H. Brand, newly appointed British treasury representative here, has a tie to the United States of which few high-placed Britishers can boast. . . . His late wife was Phyllis Langhorne of Virginia, sister of Viscountess Astor.

Their son is a lieutenant in the Coldstream Guard. One of their daughters is the wife of Lieut. John M. Polk, USNR; the other is married to Lieut. Lyttleton Fox, USNR. . . . Mr. Brand was once a member of Lord Miler's widely publicized "kindergarten" and spent seven years in South Africa helping to unify that country after the Boer War.

When pretty Elizabeth Cannell Bradley, daughter of Lieut. Gen. Omar N. Bradley, commander of U. S. ground forces in England, walks down that well-known aisle tomorrow with Cadet Henry Shaw Beukema, the nuptial ceremony will culminate a romance begun in 1934. The principals were then schoolmates in the seventh grade at West Point, attended the same dancing class.

Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who is staying at the White House while her husband, Major Boettiger, is on duty at the War Department, is accepting few social invitations in Washington these days. She pleads that she is "too busy," and doesn't expect to do any entertaining.

Johnny Boettiger, her youngest son, is with his parents here. Her two elder children, by Curtis Dall, are on the West Coast. And, by the way, they aren't called "Sistie" and "Buzzie" now—as they were more than a decade ago when their grandfather first moved to 1600 Pennsylvania ave. "Sistie," now known as Eleanor Boettiger, instead of "Sistie" Dall, is 17 and a junior at a San Francisco girls' school. "Buzzie"—Curtis Boettiger—is 14, finishing grade school, and will enter high school in Seattle next fall.

HEARD ON "THE HILL": One of the few members of Congress who is a graduate of the United States Naval Academy is Representative Edouard Izak of California. . . . He would still be in there, fighting, if wounds received as a prisoner in Germany hadn't forced him to retire from service in 1921. He holds the coveted Congressional Medal of Honor "for service above and beyond the call of duty."

Mr. and Mrs. Izak's twenty-ninth wedding anniversary fell on Monday but they celebrated the event a couple of days ahead by slipping off for a weekend at the Henlopen Hotel, Rehoboth Beach . . . They have six children. . . . Their daughter, "Happy" (Mrs. Robert Melvin Waller), recently returned to Washington with her 2-year-old son. Her husband is on overseas duty. Two Izak sons are in service. One, 19-year-old Charles, is a private in Field Artillery in New Guinea. The other, Lieut. (j. g.) Edouard, jr., is a pilot, now stationed at Cape May.

IS-MY-FACE-RED DEPT.: One way to determine the number of readers for any column is to make a mistake. Then you find the whole town sees it. Other day, for example, I mentioned former Senator Lee of Maryland, unwittingly put a "late" before his name. It was a slip of the typewriter. I know he is very much alive and making his home in Montgomery County. My apologies to Mr. Lee . . . and my thanks to the many readers who called my attention to the error so I could take this means to rectify it.

SEPTEMBER WEDDING is planned by Miss Alleyn Barbara Turnbull, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Harold Todd Turnbull, now of Charlottesville, N. C. The bridegroom-elect is Pfc. Oscar Andreas Thorup, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thorup of Chevy Chase.

Women Give D-Day Salute At Luncheon

Members of the women's committee, National Symphony Orchestra saluted D-Day by standing in silence for one minute at their annual luncheon yesterday at the Statler.

Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the committee which has been largly responsible for the tremendous growth in popularity of Washington's first symphony orchestra within the past few years, presented motion for the D-Day observance.

The luncheon was staged as the opening gun in the 1944 watergate concert series, which opens Sunday night.

Among those at the speakers' table, in addition to Mrs. Howe, were Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Robert Henry Dunlop, Mrs. Carl Spaatz, representing the Army committee; Mrs. Edwin Watson, Mrs. Milton King, Mrs. Peter Belin and several others.

Noted at various tables were Mrs. Walter Tuckerman, Mrs. Stuart Godfrey, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin and many Washington women interested in the symphony.

Hans Kindler, symphony conductor, spoke briefly. Mr. Kindler recently canceled plans for a South American tour this summer and will conduct at the Watergate series.

Gen. Almeida Honor Guest Of Brazilians

Brazilian military men in Washington took time out from official duties yesterday to geet a top-flight officer from their homeland, Gen. Milton de Freitas Almeida.

Occasion was the 6 to 8 p. m. party honoring the general, at which Maj. Mauricio Pereira Lessa of the Brazilian Military Mission and Mme. Lessa were hosts.

General Almeida, with six members of his staff, arrived in Washington several weeks ago at the invitation of the United States Government. They have since traveled the country extensively, visiting Army posts, war plants and Brazilian military men training here. The general expects to be in Washington only a few days on this visit and will leave shortly for his homeland.

More Than 100 There

More than 100 guests assembled in the Lessa home at 4801 Connecticut ave. for the fete. In the company were representatives from the Brazilian Embassy, Inter-American Defense Board, Joint United States-Brazilian Defense Commission and Brazilian Military Mission.

The Ambassador and Mme. Martins were there, along with the Minister and Mme. Lobo.

Others in attendance included Brig. Gen. and Mme. Oscar Fuentes, Brig. Gen. and Mme. Estacao Carvalho, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. J. G. Ord, Col. and Mrs. Milton Hill, Col. Palmer Edwards, Col. and Mme. Jorge Sarmiento and Col. and Mrs. Le Page Crommiller.

Military Attache Attends

The Polish Military Attache and Countess Zamoyska were there, as were the new Brazilian Air Attache and Mme. Travasso, the Naval Attache, Admiral Silvio de Noronha, his cousin, Lieut. Jose de Noronha, and the Chilean Air Attache and Mme. de Ruiz-Diez.

Also attending were Lieut. Col. and Mme. Gregorio Martuez, Capt. and Mme. Alfredo Arellano, Col. L. S. Hitchcock, Comdr. and Mrs. Herbert Parker, Lieut. and Mrs. Luther Matthew Bolton, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Howard Adams, Lieut. Col. Calisto Valle, Maj. and Mrs. Gustav Pabst, jr., Maj. and Mrs. William Chattock, Lieut. L. A. Chapman, Maj. and Mrs. Robert Boyd, Col. and Mrs. John Gillett, Maj. G. W. Connelly, Maj. Thomas Price and many others.

Hilah White Is Betrothed

Mr. and Mrs. William Henry White, jr., University, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Hilah, to Lieut. Charles Granville Craddock, jr., USNR, son of Mr. and Mrs. Craddock, Lynchburg, Va.

Miss White, who with her parents formerly lived in Washington, attended Holton-Arms School and Bennett Junior College.

Mrs. Boal Arrives June 15

The former Ambassador to Bolivia, Pierre de L. Boal and Mrs. Boal, have leased the home of Mrs. E. Brooke Lee on 33d pl. and will take possession June 15 upon Mrs. Boal's arrival from Mexico City with her daughter, Miss Mary Elizabeth Boal.

Their elder daughter, Miss Mathilde Boal, has been the guest of Mrs. Lee since her arrival from Bogota several weeks ago.

Mrs. Lee will move today to the country home of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Lee at Llewelyn Field, Norwood, Md., where Colonel Lee's father, former Senator Blair Lee, is also making his home. Mrs. Lee's son, Bruce, who has just graduated from St. Alban's School, will enter Pomfret School, Connecticut, next fall.

Miss Durbin Is Busy Sprouting New Wings; Notes of the Theater

(Reprinted From Tuesday's Early Editions)

THE CONTENTION advanced in a personal note from Mr. J. W. "Pete" Dailey of Universal City, Calif., that it takes a lot of courage to toss a 30-million-dollar formula right out the window is hardly designed to precipitate an argument.

DEANNA 'DURBIN

That figure, not too roughly, represents the business done at the box-office by Deanna Durbin's first 13 pictures. All those productions, beginning with "Three Smart Girls," fell pretty much into the same classification—with allowances, of course, for the star's evolution from girlhood into young womanhood. But the point is that all these stories were tailored to present her just about as she was in real life.

Felix Jackson is the gentleman who, in a manner of speaking, has kicked all that vigorously over the heart, despite the eloquence of so talkative a sum as 30 million dollars when arguing to the contrary.

When Mr. Jackson took over the driver's reins on the singing star's productions, the temptation was strong to remain comfortably in the groove, as witness "Hers to Hold" and "His Butler's Sister." Then he decided to do an about-face.

When Mr. Jackson decides to do an about-face, there is nothing equivocal or oblique about it.

Somerset Maugham's "Christmas Holiday," serving as Deanna's current vehicle, is a radical departure from anything in which she has been seen in the past.

The picture is reported to adhere rigidly to the story line of the book. The principal change has been in the locale. In deference to the Hays office, the production code, and for other obvious reasons, the drama now unfolds against the background of a New Orleans honky-tonk, instead of a luridly crimson establishment in Paris. Also the character of Durbin's murderer-husband, played on the screen by Gene Kelly, has been accentuated more than it was in the book.

Change of Pace

It is pointed out that this innovation will mark a number of "firsts" for Miss Durbin. She will be seen in a dual role for the first time, she will participate in her first screen marriage and, for the first time, will undertake the portrayal of a preconceived character, not deliberately patterned to fit her own natural endowments. "Christmas Holiday" will be the first essentially dramatic story in which she has appeared.

The extent of her departure from norm is made plain by the announcement that she will sing only two songs—Irving Berlin's "Always" and "Spring Will Be a Little Late This Year," written especially for her by Frank Loesser.

What seems certain to come out of all this is that we soon shall be finding out whether Deanna Durbin is an actress or merely an enormously appealing singing ingenue.

It is a matter of some importance—especially to Mr. Jackson and Universal. Miss Durbin and the public have something at stake, too, even if it isn't another possible 30 million dollars.

To quiet our phone, that 1879 Buffalo Bill program we were talking about here yesterday is from the venerable A. B. Griffith's collection of several thousand, which he interlards with something like 500 autographed photographs of theatrical celebrities and world figures. A bit of an actor, whistler and an adept at imitations, Mr. Griffith long has been a familiar figure, himself, in Washington's amusement scene as well as in theaters up and down the land in all directions. What keeps him so young is the greasepaint flowing in his veins in place of blood!

With its opening date definitely set for Wednesday night, June 14, and "Murder in the Old Red Barn" its inaugural attraction, the Willard Roof Music Hall this season will be breaking out a practically all-new roster of players. Lionel Ince, Cornelius T. Frizzell and Tommy Johnson, pianist, will be the only members of last year's company to return, what with the armed services, the allurements of welding, the call of "the road" and all. Newcomers will include the likes of Danna McRea, Edythe Wood, Peter Harris, June Stoll, Ann Sullivan, William Manceau and Kent Dobbs, with Kirk Brown, jr., late of the "Kiss and Tell" company, directing. This group embraces experience in the considerable field of motion pictures, radio, the Broadway stage and the justly celebrated Pasadena Playhouse. And another thing. There will be a quartet featuring favorite, old-time tunes amongst the beer and pretzels.

Dots and Dashes

John Grierson, leader of the British documentary film producers and, since 1939, Canadian Government Film Commissioner, will be speaker at the June 7 luncheon meeting of the Nontheatrical Division, Bureau of Motion Pictures of the OWI at the Roger Smith Hotel. . . . George Shepp of the Hyattsville Theater, and the Prince Georges Post, American Legion, have organized the kiddies in their territory into junior commandos to spearhead a concerted drive for bond sale solicitations in the Fifth War Loan campaign. . . . In conjunction with the screen showing of "Make Your Own Bed," at the Earle Theater, Harry Anger has articled Harry Steffin and the Winter Sisters to head the stage revue—new faces to Washington audiences. . . . One of the largest advance sales in the history of the Watergate is reported for the "Stars Under the Stars" opening attraction, Friday night. . . . Art Hodes, famous blues pianist, who will star on the bill with his orchestra—along with Richard Dyer-Bennet and Pearl Primus—yesterday was honored by the Jazz Research Society of Washington, at Variety Club. . . . "The Imposter," costarring Jean Gabin and Ellen Drew, will be the next screen offering at RKO-Keith's Theater. . . . Tamara Toumanova and Casey Robinson, noted screen writer, will be honor guests at a dinner in the Statler this evening—an occasion at least remotely related to the forthcoming screen presentation of "Days of Glory." . . . More of this later.

What's-in-a-Name Note

Maybe the word should have been "banquet."

Visitor in Capital

TAMARA TOUMANOVA, famed Russian ballerina, soon to be seen on the screen as costar with Gregory Peck in Casey Robinson's "Days of Glory." Toumanova and Mr. Robinson were feted in the Hotel Statler last evening

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

BOTH SIDES are playing it down in the news, but a red hot GOP controversy is raging round the large and not easily moved frame of Wendell Willkie.

The tug-of-war is to get him committed to go along with the Republican candidate—and there doesn't seem much doubt that the candidate will be Dewey. GOP leaders with their ears to the ground figure that Willkie has a big bloc of do-or-die followers who will follow him to the bitter end, and that these followers could tip the scale between victory or defeat. They figure that a million votes at a minimum could be swung away from the Republicans to Roosevelt, should Willkie choose to support the President.

That is why men close to Willkie, such as Harry Luce, publisher of Time, Life and Fortune, have been urging him to get on the Dewey band wagon.

On the other hand, a few diehards such as Clarence Budington Kelland, Arizona novelist who was deposed as publicity chief of the Republican National Committee, have been passing out word that they don't want Willkie's support for Dewey. Kelland is a close friend of Herbert Hoover's, was one of Hoover's guests at the famous Bohemian Grove celebration near San Francisco. However, it is not known whether he voices Hoover's ideas when he wants Willkie to be spurned.

Simultaneously, certain other GOP leaders, apparently worried about Kelland's sour-grapes attitude, have been making advances to Willkie. The last thing they want is to lose the Willkie bloc of votes.

Capital Chaff

AT ONE TIME, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek was almost persuaded by vivacious Bob Smith, general manager of the Los Angeles News, to write a daily column rivaling Mrs. Roosevelt's. But Madame Chiang's advisers vetoed the idea . . . Ambassador Laurence Steinhardt is coming back from Turkey for conferences. Despite all the Allied pressure, plus Allied lend-lease, Nazi Ambassador Von Papen has been able to keep the Turks in line. Von Papen was German military attache in Washington before the USA entered the last war and was later shown to have plotted to blow up the Welland Canal and to have been involved in other large scale sabotage The rump convention of South Carolina Negroes, who will seek seats at the Democratic National Convention in Chicago, will not be seated on the ground that they did not hold county conventions. Actually, their convention was a spur-of-the-moment matter, organized by one man, and did not represent the Negroes of South Carolina.

Radio Station Debunk

A NEW HIGH in Axis gall was revealed the other day by Dr. Robert D. Leigh, head of the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service of the Federal Communications Commission. Radio Station DEBUNK has been definitely located in Germany, although its announcers mischievously claim to be broadcasting from here. It specializes in daily propaganda programs for Midwesterners.

Dr. Leigh reported that his FBI's was monitoring the station one night and picked up the following announcement: "Before we continue the program tonight, we would like to inform you that the Federal Communications Commission has renewed our license and given us a new wavelength, commencing June 15."

A short time later, the station went off the air temporarily, declaring that it was in difficulty with the FCC because of a news broadcast. When DEBUNK returned to the air after a few days, it announced that its difficulties with the FCC had been straightened out, that it was operating on FCC License No. 382, and that the FCC had awarded the station a gold medal.

Broadway Potpourri

New York, June 6.—When the Portuguese liner Serpa Pinto was halted by a Nazi submarine the crew member who was taken aboard the sub asked for permission to return to his ship and get some of his belongings. "The ship already has been torpedoed," he was told. On the sub's open registry, which he saw, were the names of the ships already torpedoed. The last entry was the Serpa Pinto . . . When Berlin radioed the sub not to torpedo the ship, the commander told the captain to take up steam immediately and proceed. "But it will take me a few hours to get my crew back," said the captain. "They're in lifeboats now, all over the ocean." That's why the sub cruised among the lifeboats, to tell the crew to return.

BRENDA FRAZIER

The passengers believed that the halting of the Serpa Pinto was by way of warning and reprisal, because of the statement made by Salazar, on the day before the vessel sailed, that Portugal would reduce its shipments of war material to Berlin . . . In the submarine, while the message from Berlin was being awaited, the ship's captain told the sub commander: "Do you realize that two people and a baby already have lost their lives?" The commander shrugged his shoulders . . . The baby's life was lost, in the dark, when a lifeboat which was being lowered dipped at one end. The baby's sister was rescued.

In one of the lifeboats were Mr. and Mrs. Isidor Martin-Montis and their family. When their lifeboat was lowered, the men immediately began to row. They rowed and rowed, furiously, but made no headway. Then it was discovered that the boat was still tied, by a rope, to the Serpa Pinto. It was impossible to untie the knot . . . The Dominican Minister to Lisbon was able to cut the rope. He cut it with a poniard. When the passengers abandoned the ship, he had gone to his stateroom to get this poniard and two pistols. He wanted these to protect the honor of the women during the five days he expected the lifeboat to be at sea.

Governor Bricker's manager, when in town, vowed that come what may Bricker's name will go up in nomination at the convention, and that 150 votes are assured him . . . Brenda Frazier Kelly and her husband, Shipwreck Kelly, will be in Rio de Janeiro soon . . . The air-conditioned offices of the War Production Board will have no Freon this summer . . . When Judge Sam Leibowitz learned of the robbery at his home last week, he sighed: "Well, it shows that even thieves are democratic—they're no respecters of persons" . . . Natalie Hammond Core of the socialite Hammond family, will make her stage debut in "Broken Hearts of Broadway."

Bernard Baruch was discussing the industrial future of the country. He mentioned six men who had attended the Churchman's dinner in his honor. "Any nation which can produce six men such as these," said Baruch, "cannot lack for intelligent management" . . . Then he named the six—William Jeffers, Robert Patterson, James Forrestal, Herbert Bayard Swope, Ferdinand Eberstadt and Jimmy Byrnes.

Dorothy Parker read Edmund Wilson's review of her new book, in which the critic wondered about a selection of an author's published works being printed while the author is still alive, and wired Wilson: "I'm not dead yet, but it's only 3 a. m." . . . Alexander Ince gave a party at his home, and some of the guests noticed that the top bookshelf was empty. "Oh, that," the host shrugged. "You see, I read all those books which were in the top shelf."

Early this year Rafael de Jordana, son of the foreign minister of Spain, arrived in New York on a mysterious mission. While he was here he learned to play the guitar. When the youngster returned to Madrid, word of his new musical accomplishments came to the attention of the American Ambassador, Carleton Hays. The Ambassador decided that this was a cause for celebration. He gave a party in honor of young Rafael. And there, before the artist colony of Spain and the full diplomatic corps of Madrid, in this building which once was the palace of the Duke of Montellano, the returned voyager looked up at the eminent guests and at the famed collection of Goyas on the wall, plunked his guitar, and played "Pistol Packin' Mama."

Vice President Wallace made two speeches in China, and three speeches—in Russian—in the Soviet Union . . . The Vice President took with him a streamlined fountain pen, as a gift for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek. He also took some perfume, a gift from Mrs. Wallace to Madame Chiang . . . Jan Matulka, the Czech artist who stopped painting pictures and started painting abstracts when the Munich pact was signed, and who then stopped painting altogether when Hitler came to Prague, resumed his painting here three months ago. His exhibit opens at the ACA Galleries on Monday . . .

T. E. Carpenter Services Held In Bethesda

Funeral services were held last night for Thomas E. Carpenter, 59, of 1707 Columbia rd. nw., at the Reuben Pumphrey funeral home in Bethesda, Md.

Mr. Carpenter, a specialist in the Smaller War Plants Corp. for the past year, died Monday at Emergency Hospital after a fall in his home two weeks ago.

Born in Oakland, Calif., Mr. Carpenter came here in 1942 to serve as a refrigeration expert with the War Production Board. He had worked previously as a refrigeration engineer with the American Radiator Co. and the Worthington Pump Co.

He was a member of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers and an honorary member of the American Society of Naval Engineers.

Mr. Carpenter is survived by his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Cameron Carpenter; a daughter, Mrs. W. G. Nagle of Ocean City, Md., and a sister, Mrs. Wheeler Althof of Pocatello, Idaho.

Mrs. Harriet P. Junkins

Interment services for Mrs. Harriet Page Junkins, formerly of 1324 Mass. ave., nw., who died last Saturday at the home of her daughter in Nashville, Tenn., were held yesterday afternoon at the Abbey Mausoleum on Military rd., Arlington. The Rev. Hunter M. Lewis, assistant pastor of the Epithany Episcopal Church, officiated.

Born in Boston, Mass., Mrs. Junkins had been a resident of the District for about 25 years. She was a member of the Political Study Club; Quentin Roosevelt Unit, American Legion Mother Club, and Esther Chapter, no. 5, of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Mrs. Junkins is survived by a daughter, Mrs. W. F. Pond of Nashville, Tenn., and a son, Page Junkins of Detroit, Mich. A brother, William H. Page, a lawyer of New York City, died several years ago, and a sister died in France last year. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Bird Jenkins, cousins, live in this city.

Edward J. Frost

Boston, June 6 (AP).—Edward J. Frost, 71, president of Wm. Filene's Sons Co., one of the world's largest specialty shops, died today after a long illness. He had been associated with Filene's since 1906.

He was a director of Bloomingdale Brothers of New York, Abraham & Straus of Brooklyn, F. & R. Lazarus Co. of Columbus, Ohio, all department stores.

Col. Joseph Beck

New York, June 6 (AP).—The death of Col. Joseph Beck, Foreign Minister of Poland at the outbreak of the war, was reported tonight by the Nazi-controlled Romanian radio.

Beck went to Romania in 1939 after his country had been invaded and the broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, said he died yesterday after a long illness.

John Hix

Hollywood, June 6 (AP).—John Hix, syndicate artist who created and drew the "Strange As It Seems" cartoon, died at his home today of a heart attack.

Truck Drivers' Dispute Goes Before WLB

The eight-month old dispute between 500 Washington members of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehousemen and Helpers (AFL) and the Labor Relations Council of the District Trucking Association was certified to the War Labor Board yesterday after the Labor Department's Conciliation Service failed to help reach an agreement.

Points at issue between the two involve requested wage increases of $10 a week for all classes of workers in the union, reduction of hours from 48 to 40 a week, and vacation allowances of two weeks after one year's service and three weeks after three years.

Involved in the negotiations, which began last year after expiration of the union's contract, are 15 trucking firms here. Local 639 of the Brotherhood is now fighting for a new contract.

Martinsburg Area Starts Shipping Sweet Cherries

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 6 (Spl).—Movement of sweet cherries, first of the 1944 tree fruits from this big producing belt, began today.

The sweet cherry crop is not a major factor in the belt and constitutes no problem in the handling. Some of it will go, it is expected, to quick-freeze or other processing plants at Winchester, Va.

The sour cherry crop, which has become annually an increasingly major factor in the early fruit work, promises to yield between 1500 and 2000 tons this year, starting substantial movement in about a month, it was said today by growers. The outlook for quantity and quality is excellent, as against a bad year in 1943 when a late freeze killed off most of the indicated yield.

Lyon Park Club to Meet

The Lyon Park Woman's Club will hold its annual breakfast in honor of the club's past presidents at 10:30 this morning at the Lyon Park Community House. Mrs. Morris Mitchell and Mrs. Robert Dodge are in charge of arrangements. This will be the final meeting of the club until fall.

16 D. C. Girls Get Diplomas At Cathedral

Fifty-three seniors and six postgraduate students of the National Cathedral School for Girls received diplomas at graduation exercises in the Cathedral yesterday morning. Bishop Dun delivered an address.

Washington graduates were: Betty Alvord, Paulina Barnes, Lorita Dorr, Mary Echols, Mary Frohman, Mary Handy, Belle Hart, McCall Henderson, Corinne Heurich, Nancy Hutson, Marty Leeming, Priscilla Masten, Marion Moreell, Nancy Needham, Eloise Richberg and Caroline Warner.

Three Washington girls were among the seniors who received awards at annual Flag Day exercises on Monday when Donald R. Richberg spoke. Carolyn Warner and Corinne Heurich received the Bishop's Scholar awards for being on the honor roll for four years and Belle Hart received the Helen Harker award for election by the schools' students as outstanding citizen of the senior class.

Tonight at 8, 43 seniors of the Immaculate Conception Academy will receive diplomas in Hurney Hall at the Academy's seventy-ninth graduation. Dr. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, will award diplomas and prizes. Father Ignatius Smith, OP, will be the principal speaker. The valedictory will be delivered by Jean Winter.

Four District residents were graduated from the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., on June 4. They were Wilhelmina Sharron Davison, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Donald A. Davison of 2800 Wisconsin ave. nw.; Nancy Powell Eslin, daughter of Mrs. F. D. Eslin of 1718 22d st. nw.; Marion Ross, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Lewis T. Ross, of 3608 Ordway st. nw., and Elaine McDowell, daughter of Mrs. F. A. Price of 5058 Lowell st. nw.

Invasion!

Occupation!

Liberation!

These are the three biggest words in the world today . . . Invasion . . . Occupation . . . Liberation . . . and yet any school-child in America can pronounce them . . . spell them . . . and understand them. ¶To the oppressed and tortured millions enslaved in Europe they bring a brilliant ray of hope . . . a glorious upsurge of faith . . . because they symbolize everything worth living for—struggling for—suffering for. ¶To the Boys in Uniform, on all the battle-fronts of the world, they represent a mighty challenge . . . a challenge that requires all the fortitude and courage that men can muster . . . because implicit in the very words is the stark realization of untold hardship, limitless sacrifice . . . perhaps even death. ¶To Americans at home they have an even broader meaning. They represent a prophecy to be fulfilled . . . an obligation . . . and a responsibility. And since Victory is everybody's business . . . at this crucial moment in history . . . when all the world holds its breath . . . and civilization itself hangs in the balance . . . perhaps it is wise now to contemplate our individual responsibility as Americans.

THE INVASION . . .

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO ME?

Poised for months on the spring-board to Europe, the Allied armada has now launched the greatest military operation since the beginning of time. The first blow has been struck. Our boys are disembarking on the invasion coast . . . and every weapon known to military science is being brought into play, to secure and hold our bridgehead! The die is cast! The invasion of Fortress Europe is under way!

The price of Invasion . . . the cost of battle-gear and bullets will be vast . . . and must be met by those of us at home. The lives of our fighting men will be given freely and gladly. Can we be less generous with our dollars? The War Bonds we buy now will help to keep a protective umbrella over our boys as they continue on the most treacherous of all military operations . . . an amphibious landing on the hostile shore of the European fortress.

THE OCCUPATION . . .

WHAT CAN I DO TO HELP?

Territory once invaded must be occupied . . . and made secure for further military operations. Every inch of European ground that falls to our fighting men must be occupied and safeguarded . . . against the possibility of counter-attack and loss. Lines of reinforcement, communication and supply must be established and maintained . . . which means, in simple terms:

Vast armies must occupy the ground we gain . . . not for days or weeks . . . but for months on end . . . and those armies must be fed, clothed and maintained. The War Bonds you buy now will help provide the dollars that will be translated into occupation facilities . . . so that the cost of invasion will not have been in vain.

THE LIBERATION . . .

HOW CAN I LEND A HAND?

Millions now enslaved under the Nazi yoke will breathe a new air of freedom, with our every successful occupation of enemy soil. Gestapos will be obliterated . . . mass murders will cease . . . brutalities will be a thing of the past. Broken families will begin to regather . . . to bind the wounds left by fanatical and tyrannical oppression . . . to fit together again the broken pieces of family and community life.

These people must be fed . . . they must be clothed . . . they must be rehabilitated . . . physically and spiritually . . . not by the hundreds or thousands . . . but by the millions. Your War Bond dollars will help to do that vital work . . . and save the Peace our boys are buying with their lives . . . and cleanse this world of bigotry, brutality and barbarism . . . bringing Freedom and Liberty to People of Good Will everywhere . . . and the fulfillment of mankind's everlasting objective:

Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness!
